REFLECTIONS

Mother's Day

Even the word "Mother" brings a quickened heart-beat. Our mothers occupy a place in our hearts no one else can ever fill. Lincoln said, "All that I am I owe to my mother."

To glorify her this Sunday, May 13th, is right and proper; she doesn't ask for a fence around her little world, just thoughtfulness. A note scribbled in pencil, a welcome gift; a telephone call across the miles is happiness in words; a dinner, with her in the place of honor, will make her smile with pride and joy; take her to the church of her choice; for a visit with friends—glorify her, make this Sunday truly Her Day.

This man's mother is gone. He and his wife choose a mother whose children are gone; they glorify this lady in their mother's name. He said, "We are as happy as children." Those two people have found a secret of happiness.
