Unknown Strength

Nothing else someone has said, makes a man as strong as a cry for help. Lucian was the weaker of two brothers, Mark, his brother, could jump higher, run faster, lift more, swim better, bat a ball farther; he was the hero — Lucian the "duffer."

The two boys were walking home along a path beside the river. Again Lucian had made a miserable showing at a school baseball game. Mark was gloating when a cry, "Help!" was heard around the bend. Lucian sprinted ahead, left his brother behind, leaped into the water, swam to the rescue of a young neighbor girl. Mark, ashore, helped pull the girl onto the bank, while Lucian ran for assistance. He proved to himself that he was a superior person and became one of the outstanding athletes of our time.

We never know what we can do until we hear the word "help!" We use only a small percentage of our capacity, accept a minor role when we are capable of stupendous feats. Search for that hidden power.
