Help Yourself To Happiness

Don't Be Afraid To Praise Your Family!

By Mary Harris Seibert, M. A.

"How often do I have to remind you to mow the lawn?—Won't you ever remember to hang up your coat?—Can't you do anything right without spoiling something?" Alice's bachelor sister was visiting Alice for a week-end. "If anyone corrected and criticized me as much as you do your children and Bob," said Sis, "I'd either blow my top or leave home. Everything you say is either a form of NO-YOU-CANNOT or NO-YOU-MUST-NOT do whatever it is they are doing. Why don't you try telling them up with a little praise?"

It would indeed be a good thing if we could sometimes hear ourselves as our family hears us. We are at times shrews, unable to see and praise the good of the people around us. We criticize our family unmercifully, as we would never do to strangers. We reject their small efforts to please with sharpness which verges on cruelty. Unknowingly, we often present these attitudes, which may lay the foundation for future parent-child, husband-wife hostilities.

We must let our family know that we approve of them, for approval is important to their well-being. Praise means love and security, and acts as the stimulus to further effort to please and do the correct thing. People who spend most of their time in the doghouse are not happy. They cannot put forth their best efforts or work to the full extent of their powers. Children love praise for hands cleanly washed for toys neatly put away, for promptness at meals. Husbands, too, thrive on a kind word about the lawn newly mown, a faucet mended, or a birthday remembered.

Discipline and negative criticism have their place in a world of reality. It is true, but whenever or wherever it is possible, let us use the positive approach of praise and approval. Don't be afraid to praise your family; they will love it and you!

Can I Really Fall in Love At First Sight?

"As soon as I saw him," says Judy, "I fell in love with him. I knew it was the real thing right away!"

There is no such thing as falling in love. Family Relations experts say, nor is there such a thing as love at first sight. These opinions will arouse howls of anguished protest from our bobby-soxers. However, Ralph G. Eckert, former consultant to the California department of education, has met their protest with a 32-page pamphlet entitled "So You Think Its Love." This pamphlet attacks a number of juvenile ideas which were inherited from mom and pop. It is issued by the Public Affairs Committee, 22 East 38th street, New York 16, New York.

Lasting love is based on realities, on qualities which have proven their existence—not on the flash judgement of the passing attraction. How much do you really enjoy a person? How much do you care about his happiness? How much do you admire him? How much do you respect him? Is there normal physical attraction between you? Love is all of these and more. Grandma used to say that "when the right person comes along you'll know him." However, according to statistics of marriage counselors, love seldom comes permanently and suddenly and proves lasting. It has been found that four out of five happy marriages have ended in divorce at the end of the first year. Here are some questions with which you may wish to test your love for your partner:

1. Are we considerate of each others beliefs?
2. Are we eager for our friends to know each other?
3. Are we willing to concede differences of opinion?

4. Are we anxious to "lease each other?"
5. Are we proud of each other's appearance?
6. Do we overlook each other's shortcomings?

7. Do we feel that we can trust each other completely?
If we cannot answer YES to the majority of these questions, we may well not be in love.
