LIUT. LA SELLS STEWART WRITES INTERESTINGLY FROM FRANCE

Former Cottage Grove Logger in Charge of Operations Over There.

L. S. Hill has received the following most interesting letter from Lieutenant LaSells Stewart, of the 20th engineers, formerly woods foreman for Mr. Hill: Camp de Forest, June 30, 1918.—Dear Lon: Will try and entertain you for a moment or two with some of the happenings and doings since leaving the states.

We left there some two months ago. As far as the trip was concerned not much of it is worthy of mention. I escaped seasickness and while still in port there, was placed in charge of one of the "lookout details." This detail comprised picked men for watches on the boat for submarines and the enemy in any form. We sighted nothing more dangerous than some flotsam, or drifting timbers, and a few sharks. The trip was fine—no rough weather or rain—very much of an ideal pleasure trip, in fact.

When we reached port over here the colonel dispatched me ashore to arrange for the disembarkation of troops and cargoes, so I was the first man from our transport to land. Needless to say, I found many things to interest me at once. To go into the details of them all would take too long, and besides I must save some of it to tell you fellows when I return.

We were at a rest camp two or three days, then entrained for La Celle Bruere. We landed there, and there part of the company remains to operate the mill, while I was placed in charge of all logging operations and am camped in the forest of Meillaut, 8 kilometers from Bruere, in command of ninety men which number will be considerably increased in the near future. We are cutting white oak running from 16 inches to 6 feet at the butt; there is plenty of it, too; the wood is a little harder than the same kind of wood back in the states, but we have the old-time American aggressiveness and simply eat our many difficulties alive.

There are numerous difficulties here in logging. For instance, all corpus under 12 years of age must be left uncut; all regrowth trees must not be broken by falling trees; all of the trees are marked, and no wood is allowed to go to waste; all chips are saved; limbs and tops are cut into ties, either standard, 8 feet long and 8 inches in diameter, or war ties, running from 4 feet 6 inches to 14 feet in length, cut on 6-inch graduations, five inches in diameter; all facings from these must be saved.

The mill output is all timbers running from 2 1/2" to the maximum, these timbers being used in the construction of trenches and the many works of construction on the front, some ties, also, being cut at the mill. The mill cuts 60,000 on two shifts, and this tract of timber will last until some time next year, then we have others.

The timber will be moved out of the woods to the main or province road on high wheels, and from there to the mill by means of tractors and trailers, 6 tractors and 42 trailers being used.
As in everything else, France is behind the states in lumbering facilities, the more advanced methods of the states being undreamed of here.

Now I will try to tell you of some of the things which interest me over here and which may possibly be of interest to you. I hardly know where to begin, though, for everything is so far different from things "back home."

The scenery—the country itself—is too beautiful for words, resembling nothing in the states, but beautiful, by gosh! man, but you would open your eyes could you see it. One view here close to camp from the hilltop overlooking St. Amant, a town of 8000 or 10,000 people, is especially beautiful. Take the roads; they were put down by the Romans about the fourth century, and they are beautifully well-drained, hard and bridged. Of course, the French keep them up, but they are the same roads. Some of the buildings date back to that time. The Romans, in fact, built the first houses in St. Amant, also numerous churches and other buildings which have withstood the ravages of time, and stand today in their beauty and antiquity.

There are immense altars and crosses of stone, before which travelers pray, all along the roads, the crosses having sculptured images of the crucified Christ on them, the altars having sculptured images of the Madonna with the dying Christ on her lap. They cause the passerby to have a thought or two, even if he does come from the hurrying states.

In Meillaut is the home of the owner of the estate, the Marquis de Meillaut. Of course, the "Marquis" part is only honorary now since France has become a republic, but it is the same family and descendants of the family that have owned the estate for centuries. The house is one of the most beautiful pieces of architecture I have ever seen, especially the interior. There are weapons, paintings, and other forms of decoration which are centuries old. No piece of wood in the flooring or paneling is longer than 30 inches, all of it being worked out and matched by hand with many carved pieces of wood in many forms, and all exceedingly beautiful. There is the medieval moat, with place for drawbridge, entirely surrounding the house, and besides this, there is a 10-foot stone wall surrounding it all, and shutting out the public. The dungeon, the chapel, and such, are there just as they were built centuries ago.

I tell you, Lon, it certainly is some country to a person raised in the states surrounded by the newness and nature's grandeur. This country has a beauty unexcelled and reaped by age and civilization while to the states the beauty is new, and most affected hardly at all by progress.

Everything here is behind America—they cannot come in any way close to us in progress and advanced methods, the reason being, no doubt, that they have no new forces to combat, while we people of America are still pioneers, in a sense, with mountains, woods, and streams presenting new difficulties to be coped with every day, thus adding the vim necessary to the fight of life—necessary to call forth best efforts.

With the cost of everything entering into the making of a newspaper increasing, it is absolutely essential that all subscriptions be paid promptly. ***

Going It Too Hard

Overwork, worry, overeating and lack of exercise and sleep are responsible for much kidney trouble. If your back aches and the kidneys seem weak, rest up and use Don's Kidney Pills.

H. N. Henriksen, Dorena, Ore., says: "I was flat on my back for about three weeks on account of intense pain across my kidneys. I think following the blacksmith trade for twenty-six years had a lot to do with bringing on the trouble in the first place. I knew my kidneys were out of whack and began using Don's Kidney Pills. They fixed me up in good shape and I haven't been bothered for a year now. I gladly recommend Don's, for I know they are a fine kidney medicine."

Price, 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Don's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Henriksen had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgs., Buffalo, N. Y. #23-30
