ALIENS JAILED FOR FAILING TO REGISTER

Because their religious teachings are against war, Harry Woltz, a Russian, and Mike Ponchuck, an Austrian, both Southern Pacific section hands at Irving, refused to register Thursday and are now in the Lane county jail.

The men say they belong to the Doukhobor sect, which is known to be opposed to war. They said they did not believe in killing anything, declaring that they did not even kill animals or fowls for food.

Woltz says he is 37 years of age and Ponchuck says he is somewhere in the 30's but does not know just how old. Both have families.

Sam Gens, who was taken along as an interpreter, gave these men a good lesson in patriotism. He showed them his little blue registration card and said "I am no Doukhobor. I came to this country to be an American citizen, and when they want me I am ready to go and fight for this country."

The federal authorities in Portland have been notified of the arrest of the men.
