FOOD WASTE IN LOGGING CAMPS IS REPORTED

Operators Accused of Using Mess in Bidding for Workmen.

Wastage of food in the logging and lumber camps of the northwest has assumed such proportions that a commission has been appointed to impose corrective measures. As a result of a survey at camps it is said that a saving of $5,465,000 a year is possible. General disregard of food conservation in the camps is charged.

The investigation, it is said, has shown that with labor scarce camp operators are using the mess as an indirect method of bidding for men. Camp cooks are instructed to go as far as they like in entering to the men. This has resulted in camps offering two to four kinds of meats, and three to six different pastries at a meal. One camp is reported as using only bread made from wheat flour and feeding substitutes to hogs, while another is reported to have an enormous supply of substitutes on hand and no wheat flour, this having been used in making white bread. Still another camp showed that for each pound of meat served there had been three-fourths of a pound of sugar consumed.

The pounds per man per meal consumed in the camps, according to the report, far exceeds that of any other industry in the country. The average is double the garrison ration of the army. A tabulation by the investigators shows that, assuming that 100,000 men are fed in the industry in the three states and that a saving of half a pound per man per meal can be effected, it will result in an annual saving of 27,325 tons of foodstuffs, worth $5,465,000.

It is the intention of the commission to arrange, if possible, for a standard mess. This would prevent competition among operators of camps.

It is not the purpose of the commission to stint the men in camp, but to curtail extravagance and keep cooks and the mess within reasonable limits.

So far as The Sentinel knows none of the cases reported are from the Cottage Grove country, but it was only a short time ago that a cook in a road building camp quit her job because the men complained of food regulations imposed by the government.

KAISER JACKSON, FRIEND(?) OF DOWNTRODDEN, IS FREE SPENDER ON SELF

Twenty-five hundred dollars for little over half an acre of uncultivated Clackamas county land. This is the price paid by Sam Jackson, editor of the Portland Journal last week for 66-100 of an acre known as the old hatchery site.

The wealthy editor of the Portland Journal needed this little tract as an addition to his beautiful summer home at Clerk Creek where he and his coterie of wealthy Portlanders while away their week-ends—far from the busy whirl of city life.

The purchase was nobody's business except Mr. Jackson's, of course, and yet the transaction calls for some casual observations which may or may not be pertinent.

Mr. Jackson is the self-proclaimed guardian of the interests of the struggling farmer, and the downtrodden laboring man, if his editorial page in the Journal is to be seriously considered. He is the arch enemy of the land grabber, the real estate speculator, and the owner of idle lands. It's a fight to a finish, with the Portland Journal sounding the bugle, and carrying the banner at the head of the parade. So reads the Journal editorial page.

Now for the moment Editor Jackson steps down and out of his editorial page and takes part in a little real estate deal which has proven to be a rather astounding transaction when land values in the Clear Creek country are considered. Editor Jackson's magnificent country villa is located about six miles east of Oregon City in what is known as the Baker's Bridge country. There are some good farms in the community, there are some good lands, and some mighty good people, but the combination does not warrant the establishment of a precedent of fixing land values at $3800 an acre.

No one but Mr. Jackson would have paid the price, it is true, and it is also true that had anyone but Mr. Jackson gone into such a speculation nothing would have been thought about the matter. Real homeseekers—men of the soil—who want to purchase farms for agricultural purposes, and who have been finding solace in the Journal's campaign against the land speculators in the vain hope that farm land prices would be brought within reach of the man of limited capital, are now watching the effect of Mr. Jackson's action. A deal of this kind does not bring new opportunities to the man of limited means. The effect is indirect, but nevertheless far reaching.

Clackamas lands are rich, they are worth money, and the man who sells is entitled to and should receive a good price—a fair price. But $2500 for 66-100 of an acre of uncultivated farm land is too much money altogether, in Clackamas or any other county.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Jackson will find his new venture a paying investment that will eventually reap big dividends. Just what use will be made of the little tract is not known, but there is no doubt that it was a much needed little corner for his magnificent country estate. The rich editor of the Portland Journal evidently wanted it, the owner was hunted up, and the deal was made.

It would help a person lots of times if he would remember that he cannot receive a favor without being under an obligation.

Oregon State Association Denounces Camouflaged Single Tax Propaganda of Kaiser C. S. Jackson

The Oregon State Editorial association at its recent meeting showed its grasp of affairs and the patriotism of its membership in the resolutions which were adopted. The first resolution was as follows:

Resolved, That the members of this association pledge their continued and undivided support to the government in all its activities designed for the successful prosecution of the war, that we fully realize that the winning of the present great conflict is paramount to all other issues now before the people of the United States, and with this end in view the State Editorial association pledges its undivided support to the government in its prosecution of the world conflict that we may have a lasting peace only on those terms dictated and promulgated by the allied forces, without the earmarks of having been made in Germany.

Another resolution asked the government to make a distinction in zone postal rates between publications issued primarily for the dissemination of news and those publications devoted more exclusively to entertainment and special features; another resolution thanked congress for the million dollars appropriated for advertising the third Liberty loan, even though none of it was spent for that purpose; another urged upon the legislature the wisdom of legislation which would keep voters in the primaries of their own parties; another resolution denounced the Townley Non-partisan league because of its failure to support the government, because it is boss controlled, because it has sought to intimidate public officials and the press, and because it seeks to foist upon Oregon radical changes in government at a time when all our energies should be concentrated on the single purpose of winning the war; two other resolutions denounced C. S. Jackson's single tax measure, camouflaged as a measure to save the government money by doing away with the publication of the delinquent tax list and Jackson's other bill to cut the legal rate for publications

ISOLATED FARMERS MAY USE WHEAT FOR FEED

Others Are Expected to Take It to the Mill for Flour.

Farmers in isolated districts, where it is not easy to bring their wheat to town, will be allowed to dispose of their small crops of wheat as they see fit, according to F. M. Wilkins, county food administrator.

This applies to farmers out in the hills and mountains who have but small patches of wheat, but all farmers with large acreages of the grain are expected to bring it to the mills for the purpose of manufacturing flour. In the isolated districts the farmers may chop it or feed it to their chickens and hogs, or do with it as they think best.

During the past few weeks Mr. Wilkins has had many inquiries regarding the small crops of wheat far back from the towns, and he took the matter up with the state food administration.
