Wholesale Prices Are Firm

Cotton Advances $10.00 Per Bale
This week comes the report that overseas freight rates on English boats have been greatly reduced in order that raw cotton can be exported from the United States to Europe. Consequently cotton has jumped upward $10.00 per bale. Opening prices on cotton underwear for next fall, 1919, are now quoted 20% higher than opening prices of fall 1918. Prices on all lines remain very firm and there have been no downward market changes except in a few remote instances. Prices are cut with level of pre-war days at this sale only for clearance. There probably will never be again this year such a complete line of desirable and actually new and up-to-date merchandise which you have need for right now, offered at such really ridiculously low prices. You will do well to buy here now.
