THE ADVERTISED TRADE-MARK GUARANTEES QUALITY

Have you ever stopped to consider the real significance to you of the trade-mark or brand name on the package or label of the article you buy at the store? Have you ever stopped to think that the presence of an advertised trade-mark on a can of pork and beans for example, is a guarantee that these beans are of good quality? This must be true else the advertising would defeat its own purpose. The trade-mark, being a mark of identification, is as much a means of rejection as of selection. That is, if the article so identified proves unsatisfactory, you are enabled by the trade-mark to avoid it a second time. Manifestly, a manufacturer could not afford to put a brand name or trade-mark on an unsatisfactory product. People would not buy it a second time and he would run himself out of business almost immediately. A manufacturer backs a branded product by his reputation. Therefore, he cannot afford to stake his reputation on any product that is not good. It is only when he puts on the market a satisfactory product, one which people will like and call for a second time, that he can afford to put the mark of identification upon it. But when he has such a product, he wants people to know that it is his. Every package he sells that helps to build a reputation for him and his goods. Advertised, trade-marked goods then are most apt to be good goods. The advertised trade-mark is your guarantee of quality.

THINGS WE THINK

Things Others Think and What We Think of the Things Others Think

All women like flattery—and most of them deserve it—for being able to get along with the men.
There are said to be 200,000 automobiles in the country—and all of them want to cross the same crossing at the same time as you do.
If you can't do a thing, the next best thing is to see that someone else does.
A great many reforms are given a trial on the ground that they can't be worse than what has gone before.
A popular soprano is said to have a voice of fine timbre, a willowy figure, cherry lips, chestnut hair and hazel eyes. Wonder what her family tree is like?
Put off until tomorrow the mean thing you intended doing today.
It is your "duty" to understand the tariff question.
The man who always knows how a thing should be done is seldom the man who has learned from experience.
Anticipation is the stock-in-trade of the optimist.
There are some compensations for the little man. For one thing he doesn't look so funny when he falls down on a slippery sidewalk.
Lives there a boy with ambition so dead that unto himself hath never said that he is some time going to be a great orator and startle the nation.
Lots of people do not get credit for all they do—which is fortunate for some.
A woman who knows how to run her husband never lets him know it.
If there never was any rain there would be no rainbows.
Today will be yesterday tomorrow. Have you accomplished anything yet?
In the battle of life all must die.
Some people pull backwards so far that they get clear around in front after awhile.
Women can't expect to get ahead very fast while they wear hobble skirts.
An Omaha taxicab company says that it lost money last year. None ever found any of it.
The first street cars to town are always more crowded on the day that the home team loses.
It is not so much the men we put in office as those we keep out.
The man without backbone is good bait for the fellows fishing for suckers.
Peace seems to be worth fighting for.
Here is some Esperanto: "Pol-voplenaj senhomaj laturincraj chean-anjoj senherboj vojok malpuraj la arenjoj senherboj montaj gastojoj estaj" malpuraj." For an easy flowing language, lucidity and simplicity it is something wonderful. Translate into ambiguous English, the above quotation reads: "There's a sucker born every minute." You don't dispute the translation, do you?

Once in awhile an irrigation company lets too much of its water into the stock and neglects to provide an outlet for the surplus.
The state of matrimony would be a more peaceable place in which to live if someone wasn't always trying to extend the boundary lines.
It is a great advantage to be a linguist. Every doctor appreciates this and can read any tongue.
One of the southern states has passed a law making it grand larceny to steal a watermelon. This must be a scheme to get all the colored population in jail until after election.
A man who gets acquainted with his future wife at a card party shouldn't be surprised if he draws a full house.
A man buried in thought is dead to his surroundings.
Selah sounds like a feminine word, but it isn't. It means quiet.
A person isn't a Christian who merely refrains from doing wrong.
There is no place on earth nor in heaven for the man who licks his wife. There's only one place left.
English suffragettes are going to stop cooking and raising babies to go to male ridicule. The men over there need not worry about the suffragette movement for awhile.
Much of the pleasure about married life comes from being married.
The man who sits around feeling bad because someone else is more successful than he, isn't doing much to remedy the condition.
No man can be dishonest without knowing it.
Doctors are now able to make a man's heart beat after he is dead. They'd better start practicing now on a few of the animated ones.
Some men get the habit of speaking sharp to their wives because that's the only way they can get a word in.
Don't trust the man who tells you men are dishonest.
An eastern professor says a 12-cent breakfast is enough for a literary person. We should rather judge that some of them had been practicing living on that amount and that it had all been going to their bodies.
Many a kind deed causes sorrow for the moment.
Don't forget that the motives that control your mind are portrayed in your face.
People do not enjoy doing things nearly as much as they do having them done for them.
