LETTERS FROM SOLDIER BOYS

6th, and from here we don't know where we are going." ***
Following are excerpts from letters of Corporal George D. Foster, 4th engineers, who is with the army of occu-patation, to his mother, Mrs. A. E. Foster, and sister, Mrs. George Alteman:

"The day the armistice was signed we were at Xivray, France, on our way to the front. We camped there in pup tents; some cold, too—we were really sure of it about 4:30 a. m., but there was not as much noise made as though someone had yelled 'chow.' We had fires and lights that night, too—something we never had had before, that close to the line.
"Well, I hope to get out of this country before my arm is full of service stripes, anyway. I have been over quite a bit of France: Landed at Bordeaux; then up to Calais; back down the Marne river at Crouettes, where I was on the Fourth; then in the Chateau Thierry drive; then St. Mihiel; on the Vesle river; in the Argonne fight, and for five months hardly out of shelling distance.
"These people here seem very friendly, but I can't seem to forget those times when I laid in a shell hole or behind a bunch of grass and waited for the one with my number on it to come over. It never got there—but it wasn't their fault.
"We spent Christmas at a little burg near Coblenz. Had chicken, mashed potato, carrots, cake and gravy for our Christmas dinner; also a bar of chocolate and a cigar. Considering the conditions in this God-forsaken land, it's better than I expected.
"The place where I am billeted is in a room off a lady's kitchen, with heat, light, Christmas trees, etc., and in our slang we are 'sitting pretty,' but I hope we will soon be away from it all and back to the United States—that's all we look forward to now, or talk about. This army of occupation is not all it reads like in the home paper.
"I just had a letter from Harry (this refers to Harry Foster, cousin of George, who visited here about two years ago), and he was just leaving for the states, with one eye and part of his skull gone. He got that in the Argonne fight—same one I was in the last drive.
"I just received my Christmas box—January 6. Was sure glad to get it. It's been a long time since I ate candy like that. And everything else was sure appreciated. Up here in boche land things are hard to get—except bum cigars, paper, pipes, pencils or wine.
"In the house where I am billeted there is a lad of 19 who put in three months on the Russian front and eight on the French. He was in the Meuse-Argonne scrap against my division, but not while I was on the front line. You ought to hear us swap stories." ***

Following are excerpts from letters from William Edwards, 54th artillery, to his wife, Mrs. Mabel Edwards, and his mother, Mrs. Martin Phillips:
"I am in a chateau near Angers. It's a long way from home, but the officers do all they can to make it pleasant for us, passes come pretty frequently, and it isn't so bad—but we'd rather be at home. I had a pretty fair Christmas and a fine dinner. My Christmas package hasn't come yet, but I'm expecting it any day and gee but I'm anxious to get it. We don't have much to do, but I'm awful tired of this country, for in three more days I will have been in France 10 months. I'm office orderly now and don't have to stand any calls. Our camp is inside a 10-foot stone wall (no I'm not in jail); it is about three acres in size, one-third of it taken up by the buildings, one-third by a garden belonging to a frog that stays here, and the rest covered by mud with a few big puddles of water for decorations.
"Well, I've just had supper. We had beans, onions and steved prunes. I can't eat prunes, so I had beans and onions.
"Be sure to write me when the 45th comes home. I would like to beat them home but there is no chance, for I don't expect to leave here for a couple of months at least." ***
