Successful Farmers

With few exceptions are using tractors to do their plowing and other heavy work. Those who aren't doing so, can't expect to be rated as successful. The Fordson doesn't eat anything. The land you would put out to hay to feed several head of horses can be put out to some crop that will bring in big gobs of the long green, which is better stuff to produce on a farm than the greenest grass ever grown.

The Fordson

Is the only moderate priced tractor that will do the work. Uphill or down makes no difference to it. It takes the mortgage off while you sit on the seat and work the lever.
