AGAINST LAW TO CATCH TROUT OF ANY SIZE NOW

It is unlawful to catch trout of any size until April 1, according to Ed. S. Lawler, deputy state game warden. The 1918 legislature passed a law to that effect but the fact is not generally known in this locality. The law used to read that between November 30 and April 1 trout 10 inches or longer could be caught, and between April 1 and November 30, six inches was the minimum length, but now between November 30 and April 1 no trout at all can be caught without running the risk of prosecution.

WEATHERSON COMES BACK AT OLAF HANSEN

Man Who Charged Others With Promoting Selfish Interests Said to Live in Glass House.

Florence, Ore., Feb. 23.—(To the Editor.)—An article which appeared in your paper of February 20, opposing the county road bonds, contains a number of misleading statements which I wish to correct.

The article referred to is signed by Olaf J. Hansen and quite severely criticizes E. J. Adams and the committee who prepared the bonding plan, charging personal interests in the apportionment of the bonding funds. Mr. Adams is too well known and stands too high in the estimation of his acquaintances to need any defense by us.

Hansen says the plan makes Florence the terminus of the Willamette Coast road, from which the roads branch north and south; that this will necessitate a very expensive bridge across the river at Florence and that this can be avoided by crossing the Siuslaw above Mapleton by a cheap bridge and following down the south side of the river to the ocean beach.

The bonding plan does not contemplate bridging the river at Florence and no provision is made for it. A ferry will probably be established here and that will accommodate the traveling public. If the road were constructed down the south side, the means for crossing the stream at Florence would be needed just the same.

Mr. Hansen charges selfish interest on the part of the committee which planned for the road on the north bank of the river. It is an old saying that "people who live in glass houses should not throw stones." Mr. Hansen did not mention that his home is on the south side of the Siuslaw, but the people here know that it is, and also that he owned the townsites of Dunsmuir and Port Siuslaw, which are also on the south side of the river. It is known also that he has been trying to sell lots in these town sites for ten or twelve years past, and that the road following the route he proposes would strike both of the above-mentioned townsites.

Would the locators of both the wagon road and railway have chosen the north bank had it not been an easier and cheaper route to build? Hardly. The long stretches of rocky, precipitous banks are still there on the south side, and Knowles creek, Hadsall creek, Sweet creek, Hoffman creek, Berhardt creek and South inlet still empty their waters into the Siuslaw on the south side, and it would require good-sized bridges to span them. On the north side the only stream that flows into the Siuslaw, west of Mapleton, is the North fork—and it is already bridged.

W. H. WEATHERSON.

QUERIES ANSWERED AS TO NATIONAL HOLIDAYS

The Sentinel frequently is queried as to the number of national and state holidays, and to answer these queries the following information is published:

There are no national legal holidays, that is, there are no holidays that are such by national law, although a number of holidays are observed in all the states through state laws. The departments of the national government make their own regulations regarding the days that employees may observe as holidays. Generally speaking, an office of the federal government may remain closed upon any day that is generally regarded as a public holiday or that is a holiday in the state or territory in which such office is situated. The only national law upon holidays is one making Labor day a legal holiday in the District of Columbia.

Legal holidays observed in all the states through state laws are New Year's day, Washington's birthday, Fourth of July, Labor day, Thanksgiving day, and Christmas. Lincoln's birthday is observed in most of the states, including Oregon. Decoration day is observed in all except seven of the southern states. Columbus day, October 12, is a legal holiday in most of the states, including Oregon, and election days are legal holidays in most of the states.

No legal business can be transacted upon a legal holiday, but for business purposes the only days generally observed are Fourth of July and Christmas.

CLARK MURDER TRIAL HAS BEEN PUT OFF FOR A TIME

The second trial of Martin A. Clark, charged with the murder of Charles L. Taylor, did not begin February 24, as scheduled, because circuit court was adjourned by Judge G. F. Skipworth until further notice on account of the influenza epidemic.

This action was taken by the judge after consulting the members of the bar and it was decided that to call the jurors and witnesses at this time would be dangerous, in view of the seriousness of the epidemic. The fact that the trial would probably attract a large crowd of spectators for at least two weeks was taken into consideration, the health authorities advising against people congregating in large crowds at this time.
