BUSTED

at Our Big Profit Sharing Sale

Last week we announced a big profit-sharing sale of over two thousand pairs of men's, women's and children's shoes at prices in many instances less than today's wholesale cost.

The number of pairs sold the first day exceeded all expectations, many lines being sold out completely. The phenomenal success of the sale was due solely to the fact that the people knew they were getting better values than are usually offered at sales.

We have several hundred pairs left and for the benefit of those who have been unable to attend the sale we announce a continuance for one more week.

Are Clothing Prices High

What is your guide in deciding on the price you wish to pay for clothes?

Do you expect your dollar of 1920 to measure off a 1914 dollar's worth of value? Do you demand a suit at a fixed price, a price you have always paid for a suit, to bring you a certain quality of fabric and tailoring? Or do you look for a definite quality of clothes and pay what they are worth—at the present dollar's buying power?

What you get for your money is the important thing. What you get decides the economy question for you—not what you pay.

Some clothes are expensive no matter how cheaply they are priced.

When you come to buy your spring suit and overcoat keep in mind these things:

—that the wage scale in clothing making has advanced just as rapidly as in custom tailoring and other fields of industry.

—production has been lowered considerably since 1914 because of the reduction of working hours in the week.

—the scarcity of woolsens and other fabrics on one hand and the increased demand on the other has influenced an upward trend to the cost of materials.

—and generally, the four years and a half of war reduced the world's surplus of materials.

Then consider the general buying power of today's dollar alongside of what a dollar purchased in 1914. You will be firmly convinced that clothing prices are NOT high—unless you pay less than a good, sincere suit or overcoat can be made for.

Investigate as carefully as you wish—you will be convinced that Kuppenheimer good clothes give the biggest value your money can buy. The modern retailer's earnest ambition is to give the best merchandise at the least cost to the consumer. He cannot control the costs of raw materials or the cost of production but he can, and does, modify the cost of distribution and his own profits. He can select his merchandise from sincere makers who have the same high ideals as his own—the best interests of the customer.

Why this store presents Kuppenheimer good clothes. Some day the fact will be generally known—that never has this maker, or the store in your community which represents The House of Kuppenheimer, offered better values and been satisfied with as small profit, per dollar, as in this exasperating period of High Prices.

Come and see the new styles for spring. Come, looking for what you will get for the money you can afford to pay.
