SALVATION ARMY TO MAKE BOYS FARMERS

Neglected Youngsters to Be Given Thorough Training in Mechanics of Farming.

With thorough appreciation of the value to the state of trained agriculturists, versed in modern methods and with a knowledge of applied mechanics necessary to modern farming, the Salvation Army in its Home Service Program for Oregon, plans to make useful farm hands, if not farm experts, of many neglected and dependent youngsters. Throughout the state there are always lads whose ages range from seven and eight to fifteen years, who will have no future apart from poverty and comparative ignorance and probable criminality. Opportunities such as those to be offered by the Industrial and Agricultural school the Salvation Army plans to establish at North Yamhill, on the 106 acre farm on which now stand the buildings of the Bishop Scott school, will open before these lads a useful life.

Brought up to manhood in clean surroundings, with daily instruction in ordinary schooling and practical instruction and practice in farming, the youngsters will not only be saved from bad citizenship but given an honorable profession or trade with which to earn their own way as men.

At the Yamhill school, to be patterned after the famous Lytton school conducted by the Salvation Army in California, the both boys and girls will find all the essentials of preparation for life's battle. The girls will be taught sewing, household duties, cooking etc. The boys will be trained in several trades and in farming, horticultural and animal husbandry pursuits and modern farm mechanics.

And while their bodies and minds are being trained their responsibilities as citizens and members of society will not be neglected in fact, one of the strongest teachings of the Salvation Army is Americanism. The school is non-sectarian.

Through the efforts of the Salvation Army in Portland, several boys have been taken from up state Oregon towns and placed at the California farm school temporarily until the funds made available by the financial campaign, May 1 to May 10, provide for the opening of the Yamhill school County advisory boards in every county in Oregon are helping the Salvation Army in this great work with children.

SALVATION ARMY TO SERVE ALL OREGON!

Business Men of Every County Join With Corps Officers to Extend Helping Hand.

A service born of service by men and women whose lives are dedicated to that service, a service not for gain for it pays its workers poorly, is to be placed at the disposal of even the smallest community in Oregon through the expansion of the Salvation Army Home Service Program for 1920.

Since its splendid service among the American troops abroad brought to the attention of the home folks the kind of work the army has been doing quietly in the slums of the larger cities, demands from all quarters have flooded in upon the army until it has been forced to double and treble its efforts.

It has been compelled to expand beyond city lines and extend its service to the remotest districts of the state. And in these out of the way places the army is solving one of the greatest economic problems, handling at their source and preventing many of the ills that result from poverty and wrong teaching.

In every county of Oregon one and sometimes two advisory boards have been formed of business men and citizens of those counties. These men are constantly in touch with their communities and judge when and how best the Salvation Army can be utilized to serve the citizens of that community. A word to headquarters brings the Salvation Army worker to take care of the man or woman, boy or girl whose misfortunes have overwhelmed them.

In the rescue and maternity home in Portland the unfortunate girl mothers of Oregon find a refuge and sanctuary.

In the boys and girls home to be established at Yamhill the life of the neglected child is shaped and the boy or girl prepared to go out into the world and win his or her own way.

In the industrial home in Portland many derelicts are made over into self supporting men and women who are no longer a charge upon their county but an asset to their community.

In the relief branches of the work done by the army many cases of poverty and sickness are handled annually. When the call for help comes there is no investigation of the worthiness of the subject. Help is given and investigation made afterwards.

Free employment bureaus which exact no membership fees, find work for hundreds of idle hands and while work is being found see to it that deserving men seeking honest employment do not starve.

STOCKED FOR BUSINESS

IT is just as important in the drug business as in any other to have a complete stock of goods, and it is equally important that the goods shall be fresh. During the short time we have been in business we have been kept busy rearranging our shelves and filling in the many missing lines and in making the place look like a real drug store.

We are pleased to say that now we can supply any reasonable want in any of the lines ordinarily carried in a drug store, and should we not have just what you wish it will be a pleasure for us to order same for you.

Each week we will carry an advertisement calling your attention to one particular line of goods.

Always we wish you to bear in mind that our prescription department is supplied with all of the many hundreds of things necessary for the prompt filling of any prescription. These drugs are fresh and new and when a prescription is filled here you may know that it has been compounded by a graduate registered pharmacist of 35 years' experience and that the contents are such as to give the results which the physician intended.

The tremendous increase in the amount of business under the new management, particularly the prescription department, has been extremely pleasing to us and it shall be our aim to merit the patronage already extended us, as well as still further increases.

Good Roads Good Sense Good Markets Less Expense

GOOD ROADS—Do you live on a graded and graveled road? Do you remember when that road was a rough and muddy thoroughfare? Do you remember how it was next to impassable in the winter months and how, even in the summer, you could not haul a full load over it because of the strain on your team and wagon, and even at that the expense of upkeep was heavy? If you have lived here long you remember all the foregoing and you know what your improved road has been worth to you and how it has enhanced the value of your property. Now it is some other fellow's turn. He wants improved roads for the betterment of his condition and the betterment of the community. Are you going to turn him down?

GOOD SENSE—You must admit that good sense was displayed when present roads were made such. That same good sense has been prevalent in every advancement since trails were the only means of communication between distant points, and has been called upon to devise and execute every plan to keep the thoroughfares of the county up to a proper standard of efficiency and in keeping with the demands of the times. Demands now are for further improvements and they are urgent demands, made so by the rapid strides we have made in commercial and industrial lines. Good sense will be shown by a vote for the road bonds.

GOOD MARKETS—There are good markets now for the producer and manufacturer who is able to avail himself of them. There can be made good markets to everyone by providing thoroughfares over which produce and supplies can be transported at a time when they can be disposed of advantageously. When such a time comes the wealth of the county will be greatly enhanced through increased values of property, greater returns from fertile soil now in cultivation and increased acreage of tillable soil or more intensified cultivation of rural tracts. Good markets for all are necessary for good times.

LESS EXPENSE—The present method of road building is expensive in that it does not follow a definite plan. Under the proposed bond issue the only definite, positive plan ever worked out is made a part of the issue. It will mean not only less expense to every user of roads by decreasing the cost per ton of transporting products, as has been definitely cited by several correspondents who have had experience. It will mean less expense to hundreds of taxpayers by removing the necessity for special road taxes in many districts. It will mean less expense to every user of the by the upkeep of vehicles and reducing the time required in hauling goods from one point to another. No matter what your business or occupation, you will be benefited by a good road system.
