Things We Think

Things others think, and what we think of the things others think.

The man who would think he had lost caste if he became a farmer, brags like all get-out about his little two-by-four garden.

It sometimes seems peculiar that a woman who has given departing employees references puts any confidence in those brought by applicants for the vacant position.

Those who hope for the best are often pretty well satisfied with the worst.

The smallest room in the world is the one where good deeds done without hope of reward are kept—and it will never be full.

It is often a good policy not to do a thing about which you are doubtful, but how much progress would this old world have made if all had followed that policy.

We often make politics a matter of charity and then wonder why taxes are high.

A woman gets the idea she wants a piece of clothing from seeing a dear friend wear it—and becomes set that she does not want it when she meets a dear enemy wearing one.

Consider ye the bottle fly and the wasp. The bottle fly pounds around and makes five times as much noise as the wasp but doesn't command one-fifth as much respect.

No matter how well a girl can swim, you'd never guess it when the right man is around and wants to give her lessons.

We don't think we are so very bad as long as there are a lot more just as bad.

A mother of twenty-six children attempted to commit suicide. Well, it wasn't race suicide, anyway.

Every man who has spent three days of his life as a devil around a country printshop wants you to believe that the only reason he didn't become a famous newspaper man was because there isn't money enough in it.

We holler like all get out for government by the people, and then when election time comes half of us don't vote.

We have known a great many people whom we would say were scrupulously honest under all ordinary circumstances but very few of them would call a conductor back to give him a fare he had missed.

The only kind of popularity that is worth while comes from doing the things that are worth while.

If nothing was covered up, what a terrible old world this would be.

Talk is cheap—so why not speak a kindly word now and then.

No one likes to hear a man continually brag about what he has done, but he is way ahead of the man who brags of what he is going to do.

A Chicago physician recommends alfalfa as an article of diet. Neigh! Neigh!

Men are naturally shy of the girl who is completely impervious to flattery.

A method has been perfected for making from certain parts of the human body an ink that is absolutely fadeless and unaffected by acids. That's a new way for some people to make a mark.

Humility is all right for the other fellow to have.

Old saying revised: A grandmother dies every minute during the base ball season.

A girl can get just as interested in base ball as if she knew the game.

Men tell men about the same things women tell women—but men don't call it gossip.

A physical culture expert says that doing housework improves a woman's figure. We think it likely that he is trying to put one over on women, but the wise young man would do well just the same to judge his sweetheart's beauty by whether her hands look as if they were used to help mother.

The more times a man imagines he is fooling his wife the more of a fool he is making of himself.

Most of us express admiration for the person who is not afraid to say what he thinks—but we get disgusted with the person who doesn't know when to shut up.

It's a real joke on the barber when he doesn't get wise to the fact that the man in his chair is deaf.

The United States has a hardy constitution or it couldn't have stood so much battering.

We are quite frequently surprised at the good we unexpectedly find in those we had condemned as wholly bad.

A noted preacher says "it is sacrilegious to raise your hat to a lady. He says the bible teaches us to uncover only on entering the house of worship. This preacher evidently does not worship at the shrine of feminine beauty and virtue.

Among the undesirable aliens are those blue-blooded fellows who come here with no intention of becoming citizens and spoil our sweet American girls by taking them away to wear European titles, when they would look much prettier in a mother Hubbard keeping house for some red-blonded American.

A millionaire in his seventies has married an Indian princess in her twenties. She's probably looking forward to the time when he will be a good Indian—a dead one.

Don't begrudge your neighbor the happiness your smile will give him.

The faster you live the quicker you die.

Many of those who come into the world half baked will be able to complete the job after leaving it.

Human hair is selling for $30 a pound. We are pleased to learn at last that those long-haired musical fanatics are worth something.

Many an optimist would be a pessimist if things weren't coming his way.

You can't buy any but cheap friends.

Don't keep your children living in fear of some fearful punishment or allow them to feel that they are not as good as their associates. It will develop a feeling of timidity that will be a great handicap in their later fight with the world.

Man will laugh at woman's ways—but still they are just the things that make him love her.

Dullest people make the best tools.

Misfortune gives a post graduate course in experience.

You can't blame a formerly henpecked husband for being afraid of his wife's ghost.

How many ironclad promises a man makes that he would never think of backing up with collateral.

You can't make amends for forgetting to take a stitch in time.

Mexico acts like a little boy who tantalizes a grown man—feeling secure in the thought that the latter would be ashamed to jump onto a baby.

Don't be so darned good to yourself that you haven't any to pass around.

Your ability to do things in the future depend upon what you are making of yourself now.

Men and women are perverse and inconsistent anyway. A man wouldn't walk on the street with a woman who had a cigar stuck in her mouth or who was squirting tobacco juice into the gutter, and a woman wouldn't walk down the street with a man whose outside clothing allowed his underclothes to show through.

"Rag time preaching" is condemned by an eastern bishop. It does seem as if the teachings of the Savior would be difficult to harmonize with that kind of a tune.

Music has a peculiar charm. It soothes both man and beast. The tiger purrs to her young and they are contented, the bird sings to her chicks and they chirp their happiness, the wildest savage has a weird tattoo that comforts, and civilized man forgets his cares under the influence of musical harmony.

You can't expect to find a very high value placed upon religion in a country where you can get a whole set of gods and goddesses for two or three dollars on the easy payment plan.

Rooster purchased at a meat market was found to be loaded with gold nuggets, and the butcher is likely to be prosecuted for charging chicken prices for mineral.

Rapidly growing finger nails are claimed to indicate good health—but there is nothing that can be allowed to look more sickish.

To some much of the pleasure about married life comes from not being married.

History repeats itself by the gossip route.

Quite a sylvan tone is given to the Portland hotel lobby by decorations of dogwood—item in Portland Oregonian. Must have used the bark.

The king of Greece has died from the effects of a bite of a monkey. The dispatch is silent as to the condition of the monkey.

Mr. Bryan says he got into politics by an accident. Well, as long as no one was hurt, it's all right.

Heiresses are all right to marry if you can't get a real woman.

Household Hints

Care of Glass—Unless cut glass is washed carefully and often it will soon look like the ordinary pressed ware. The right way is to fold a clean soft towel and put it in the bottom of the dish pan. Then pour the water in, being careful that it is not too hot. A little ammonia (about one teaspoonful of the ordinary kind) should be added, and white soap should always be used in washing glass of any kind (never common, yellow soap). Cut glass should be washed one piece at a time. A very soft brush is necessary for cleansing the "cutting."

Water in which potatoes have been boiled is the very best thing to sponge and freshen up a silk dress.

If cake pans are greased when they are cold, cake will not stick to them when taken out.

The oil stove should be cleansed each morning.

Cream separator rubbers nowadays stretch so they will not stay on. Cut out an inch or two, take a needle and thread and join the ends together. Then they will last as long as a new one.

A Booster Poem In Prose.

Tell me not in mournful numbers that the old town's on the bum; rouse up from your peaceful slumbers and come help us make things hum. If we get to work in earnest we can make things hit on high, "dust thou art, to dust returnest," is a song of by and by. All the past has gone forever—you can't call one moment back—and the future may come never, this is true, so help me Mack.

Now's the time to do the boosting, do not wait tomorrow's dawn; you may in the grave be roosting, all your chance of boosting gone. Lay aside your little hammer, grab a horn and toot a few squeals the kicker's dad-burned yammer with a joyful blast or two. Our old town is sure a pippin and we ought to boost it big; when we hear some growler yip-pin' we should biff him on the wig. Those who do not like our city ought to straightway hit the grit—boost, we say—that's our ditty—or arise and straightway "git!"

For blistered or sore feet a good remedy is dry boracic acid. Rub it on the feet and sprinkle in the stockings. Three or four applications will cure raw feet.
