WHY WINTER DEMANDS A LOW COLD TEST OIL

"If the oil in your engine congeals or thickens excessively at 15 degrees above zero, you should hardly expect it to splash and flow freely at 12 degrees above zero," said T. G. Sudell, special agent of the Standard Oil company, yesterday.

"Yet some motorists wonder why it takes so long to get the engine to run freely these cold mornings. The cold engine, not getting sufficient lubrication, is subject to excessive and damaging friction. The oil pump cannot circulate congealed oil, so there will be an insufficient supply thrown upon the cylinder walls until the struggling motor has warmed up the oil so it will flow more freely.

"A Zero cold test oil flows freely at all temperatures down to Zero, that's why it is called a Zero cold test oil. Zerolene medium (or Zerolene light for Fords) from selected California crude oil flows freely and splashes properly at all temperatures down to Zero. This Zero cold test oil gives the same correct lubrication to your engine during these cold days that you are accustomed to getting during the summer months.

Eighth Grade Examinations.

Uniform State Eighth Grade examinations will be held in districts where there are pupils who have complied with the necessary conditions, on Thursday and Friday, January 13 and 14, 1920.

Teachers must apply for the questions and make the required certificate on the usual blank before January 5.

Household Hints

Make hubby's old shirt into aprons and the cuffs into handy pan holders.

A thick slice of ham baked in grape juice is highly commended.

By putting a thin coat of good white paint on the outside of the window screens it is easy to look out, but those on the outside can not look in.

Toasted tiny cubes of bread are delicious and very good form to serve with either soup or salad.

The lightness of pancakes depends on their beating.

To remove odors from icebox, cupboard or pantry, fill a dish with boiling water, drop in a piece of charcoal and place in icebox or pantry.

When the screw top on an oil stove tank has become tightened, a piece of sandpaper held in the hand will prevent it slipping, and the top can be loosened with little effort.

To clean zinc rub with a piece of cotton cloth dipped in kerosene and polish with dry cloth.
