People Who See Well

believe, naturally enough, that they have normal vision, and do not require glasses. But it doesn't necessarily follow at all.

Many people of strong physique often can, and do, overcome a considerable error of vision because of their excess energy. They argue that inasmuch as they see perfectly of what use would glasses be to them? But when they fall ill, or get even a little below par physically, their optical defects are often revealed. Glasses are then secured with happy results.

You can't know—YOU can't know—whether your eyes are or are not a drain upon your nervous system until you have had them examined.
