

Ship and Sail under the Stars and Stripes to all parts of the world

SHIPS with the Stars and Stripes blowing from their masts are once more sailing the seven seas. They are, by the Merchant Marine Act, 1920, ultimately to be owned and operated privately by citizens of the United States.

They are American ships, carrying passengers and, as President Harding has said, "carrying our cargoes in American bottoms to the marts of the world." Keep our splendid ships on the seven seas under the Stars and Stripes by sailing and shipping on them.

BURNING UP THE FUTURE

(Safeguarding America Against Fire.)
Blessed with an inheritance of vast natural resources, the American public has always been too prodigal of its wealth. The presence of rich soil, copious water supply and minerals and timber in abundance, has resulted in an attitude of indifference to the possibility of their exhaustion.

There is always a day of reckoning, however, and this is particularly true in regard to our timber resources. We have been thoughtlessly permitting the destruction of our forests by fire to an extent that must sooner or later spell disaster if the rate of burning is not checked. As a matter of fact, lumber is already scarce as compared with conditions a few years ago.

Loss of property due to forest fires amounted to $85,715,747 during the five years ended with 1920. The magnitude of the territory burned over during this period, 56,488,307 acres, is also startling; it represents an area larger than that occupied by Utah.

Nothing is included in these government figures to indicate the loss of life in forest fires, although it is sometimes heavy as in the Minnesota catastrophe of 1918, wherein nearly a thousand persons were either burned to death or suffocated.

In addition to the lives sacrificed and the growing timber lost, there usually is an attendant destruction of settlers' homes that frequently are unprotected by insurance.

As far as the forests alone are concerned the yearly losses by fire are sufficiently serious in themselves, for the timber supply of the country is being cut and destroyed four times as fast as it is being renewed. Trees that have required 50 to 100 years to mature are razed in a few hours and unfortunately they cannot be replaced in any shorter time than that required by the original growth. There is no "jazz time" in Nature's scheme of development.

Thus in destroying the forests we are not only damaging the present but we are literally burning up the future.

Another factor that has been considered is the effect of reforestation upon our water supply; nevertheless, the two resources are closely interdependent, and a forestless America would mean a desert America. We hope that every insurance man will do all that is in his power to further the protection of our forests, as a matter of public welfare. In a number of states special legislation to safeguard our timber tracts is pending and a patriotic service of great value will be performed by those who aid in the passage of such bills.

Gorgeous Mt. Rainier

Mount Rainier is 14,408 feet above the sea-level—the second highest mountain peak in the United States. It is the center of Rainier National Park, Washington—and is situated about seventy-five miles by road east of Tacoma.

This remarkable mountain is of volcanic origin and is now crowned with snow and ice, having the most extensive glaciers to be found in the United States.

The National Parks Highway leads directly from Tacoma to Rainier National Park, and at Longmire Springs—within the Park boundaries—is a Standard Oil service station ready to serve motorists with Red Crown Gasoline.

Wherever you tour in Washington you will see the Red Crown sign on service stations and garages. It is the sign of quality in gasoline.
