The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE
XLVI.—NEW MEXICO

A S I T S
A name implies, New Mexico's history is closely allied with Old Mexico. It was the Spanish who were its first explorers, De Vaca visiting this region in 1536 and Coronado four years later. The natives were the Pueblo Indians, although they are sometimes erroneously reputed to have been Aztecs as they were well advanced in the arts and had a comparatively high civilization. These Indians were conquered in 1598 by Juan de Onate and became subject to Spanish rule, being forced to work the mines and pay tribute. Missions were established and Santa Fe was founded about 1605.

Except for a period of ten years when the Indians revolted and maintained their independence, New Mexico remained under Spanish control until in 1821 Mexico gained its independence from Spain and New Mexico became a province of Mexico. Thus it remained until the outbreak of the Mexican war, when in 1846 Colonel Kearny marched from Fort Leavenworth with his troops, occupied Santa Fe and declared this region a part of the United States. By the Treaty with Mexico in 1848, the upper part of the state was formally ceded to the United States and the Territory of Mexico was organized in 1851, which reached from Texas to California.

Arizona was set off from New Mexico in 1863 and a few years later a portion was contributed to Colorado. Application for admission as a state started in 1850, but it was not until 1910 that New Mexico became the forty-seventh state.

New Mexico ranks fourth in size among the states with an area of 122,634 square miles, but is sparsely populated and accordingly has only three electoral votes for President.

THINGS WE THINK
Things Others Think and What We Think of the Things Others Think

If Andy Carnegie had raised a family of a half a dozen girls he wouldn't have had to worry about what to do with his money. . . .

The extremes to which women have gone in dressing their hair is a natural result of the remove-your-hat theater rule. . . .

It is the little deeds of thoughtfulness and kindness that make life worth living. . . .

Pretty soon some one will get out an injunction against Isaac Newton and the laws of gravitation will be declared unconstitutional. . . .

When they get to selling eggs by the pound someone will make the pounds smaller. . . .

Certain lectures should not be delivered until the curtains are drawn and the public excluded. . . .

There probably is no one thing in the world that is absolutely necessary. . . .

Pittsburg has given 80 millions for foreign missions—which demonstrates again that nothing ever gets so bad that there is no good in it. . . .

It is a misnomer to call a person a quitter. A quitter never really gets started. . . .

We wish to observe that golden bracelets for the ankles are the latest in ladies' jewelry. See! . . .

Some people think that they have the best end of an argument if they have succeeded in keeping from being convinced that they are wrong. . . .

A person has such a time getting through this short life that it makes him doubt sometimes whether he wants to live forever. . . .

A coffin has been purchased by an eccentric Oregonian. What earthly use can he have for that? . . .

Criticism does some people much good—but the critic seldom receives any benefit therefrom. . . .

The government has established a laundry for paper currency. That's probably why our's is always "cleaned out." . . .

Over in England the suffragettes have taken to throwing bombs. Over here they throw buncombe. . . .

If all the people go to heaven who expect to, it may not be such an ideal place after all. . . .

The piano trust is said to be danger of breaking up. Probably because the members don't work in harmony.
