The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE XV.—KENTUCKY

THE kinship of Kentucky and Virginia is that of parent and child. From Virginia came most of the settlers of the western state, and with them these pioneers brought Virginia institutions and ideals. It was not until 1750 that the first authentic journey was made by a white man into central parts of the region afterwards called Kentucky.

Further explorations showed that this territory held two important attractions for settlers. The first was the great fertility of what was called the Blue Grass region. The so-called blue grass, from which this state is nicknamed the "Blue Grass State" is in no wise peculiar to Kentucky.

The second inducement for settlers was the fact that there were no Indians living in this region. It was later found that many roving bands of savages crossed the Ohio from the north and sorely harassed the early colonists until Clark's expeditions into Ohio and Indiana checked their invasions. In fact, the name Kentucky is probably derived from the Iroquois word kentake, meaning "hunting land." Another interpretation is "dark and bloody ground," but this is doubtless incorrect.

The main highways of travel at that time were Daniel Boone's "Wilderness Road" through Cumberland Gap and down the Ohio. Hardy pioneers poured into this new territory in such numbers that in 1792, with the permission of Virginia, Kentucky was admitted to the Union as the fifteenth state with an area of 40,598 square miles. Kentucky has thirteen electoral votes for president. The remarkable physical condition of its population is shown in a report of the volunteers in the Civil war. This gave their average height as nearly an inch taller than the New England troops and with a correspondingly greater girth of chest.

SHERIFF TO VISIT SCENE OF EARL HEBERT SHOOTING

To take pictures of the spot where Elmer Yeoman shot Earl Hebert for a deer on September 10, and inspect the brush and conditions of the terrain, Sheriff Fred Stickels, Photographer E. F. Martin and W. G. Hauser left Eugene Tuesday morning for Hristow meadows, 25 miles from Oakridge. Hauser was in the hunting party when Hebert was shot and mortally wounded for a deer by Yeoman.

Yeoman was indicted by the last grand jury for manslaughter but the judge ruled the indictment was not in proper form and ordered the grand jury reconvened on October 10, to again act on the matter. Photographs and information that may be secured by the sheriff is expected to be used by the grand jury and at the trial. The sheriff expects it will take three days to complete the trip.
