CLOCKWISE: Davis grooms a dog. Dog name tags. Davis grooms a dog as apprentice Avary Murray walks in with a new arrival.

“A lot of times people can’t leave their dogs in their hotels by themselves,” Davis said. “They will have a system that will link to our reservation system, where if they want to go to dinner or somewhere the dog can’t go, they’ll be able to bring the dog here from the hotel.”

Obedience training

Dog obedience training will be offered by master instructor Pam Adams. Adams brings more than 50 years of K9 training experience, including multiple American Kennel Club obedience championships.

“She’ll have a class to train them to sit, down, stay, come, heel and follow hand signals,” Davis said.

Another trainer is anticipated to offer outdoor agility classes in the summer.

“They will have apparatuses that they have to jump on,” Davis said.

From auto parts to K9 care

The COVID-19 shutdown was bittersweet for Davis, who lost out on months of income but watched her new location come into fruition.

The building, owned by Ron and Daralee Moulds, formerly served as an auto parts store and was home to a construction business before undergoing an extensive remodel over the past year to better accommodate Davis’s vision.

“They (the Moulds) did everything I wanted structurally and paint wise. Everything in the building is brand new down to the wiring and plumbing,” Davis said.

“They basically ripped everything out from the floors to the walls. They were on their hands and knees degreasing the floors so that the dogs were safe. They have faith in me and have done everything in their power to make sure I’m successful.”
