The Cannery Pier Hotel & Spa has reopened after renovations, the first step in plans for a near total makeover of the hotel's interior.

The Astoria hotel, known for its location on a dock 600 feet out onto the Columbia River, has replaced nearly everything in its over 40 rooms but the clawfoot tubs.

Linh DePledge, the hotel's general manager, said the renovations aimed to meet guest standards for luxury hotels.

"We kept what we can't improve on, which is the view, the clawfoot tub, the way that was designed, all of the things that people love. People love the
