

These will moo-ve fast

Restrictions on large gatherings will not stop Lincoln County 4-H kids from auctioning off the animals they have painstakingly raised, thanks to a partnership with Eugene Livestock Auction that will allow the sale to take place virtually.

Animals that are sold at 4-H auctions are hands-on projects used to teach kids not only the industry associated with their projects but valuable positive life skills as well. Youth are taught ethical animal husbandry and business management skills such as product quality and assurance, marketing, record keeping and outreach throughout the course of their projects.

Purchasers will receive a buyer certificate, which includes a photo of the purchased animal, the name of the youth member and the buyer's name.

Besides purchasing an animal, businesses and individuals can also donate to an individual youth, species, or the program as a whole. For more information regarding individual donations, call the Lincoln County 4-H office at 541-648-6815.

Eugene Livestock Auction will post each animal for sale on its website, www.eugenelivestockauction.com, beginning at 6 pm on Friday, July 3. The auction will run for five days, allowing bidders to place bids through Tuesday, July 7.

A link to the Lincoln County 4-H Youth Auction will be available when the auction goes live and will be posted on the Lincoln County 4-H website, www.lincolncounty4-h.com as well as the Lincoln County 4-H Oregon Facebook page.

Carve out some time for this

Registration is now open for a "Discovery in Stone" workshop to be held this weekend at the Bay City Arts Center.

Stone carving is an activity that lends itself well to social distancing, and participants are always encouraged to wear face masks and eye protection, even without the risk of viruses.

"Because this is a fairly safe type of event, we may do stone carving more often this summer," said Charlie Wooldridge of the BCAC. "We're thinking of holding workshops once a month through the early fall if we see enough interest from the community."

Most aspects of "Discovery in Stone" will stay the same: the art studio and grounds will be open from 9 am to 4 pm each day for carving; tuition will be by donation; stone and tools will be supplied; and instruction will be available. The main differences this summer are that students must pre-register and wear face masks

To register, call Wooldridge at 503-842-7013 or email baycityartscenter@gmail.com.

The Bay City Arts Center is a community workshop, gallery, art school, auditorium, dining hall and radio station wrapped up in one historic building in downtown Bay City. It's also a collection of volunteers and friends who come together in the name of art, expression and reverence for the beauty of the North Coast. The BCAC board of directors is looking forward to getting the center back to a regular schedule of monthly art shows, First Friday receptions and, of course, its legendary pancake breakfasts, as circumstances allow.
