Art Museum visited by classes; study twentieth century history

by Cecile O'Rourke

To learn more about the period of German history around the first part of the twentieth century was the purpose of the German class and art class field trip to Portland Art Museum.

During this era a new type of art was formed called expressionist art. In the Morton D. May collection shown at the museum the artists used this form of art, expressing their inner feelings on canvas.

"Many contemporary works were displayed showing the trend toward expressionism in Germany and the individual styles of various German artists," commented Sterling Bennett, senior German student about the collection.

Senior Inese Brunins said, "The exhibit was one of the most unique, interesting and almost macabre I have seen in a long time."

"The paintings were a bold, hard expression of the German society during the late 1800's and the early 1900's," commented sophomore Debby Bihn. "They expressed the true feeling of fright and pity for their country."

"The paintings expressed the feeling of the German people when under Nazi reign. The people were always in fear and almost every painting showed it," commented Phil Deines.

Expressionism is a form of art in which the painter tries to show his ideas about his subject or about the times through color, symbols, distortions, etc.

Accompanying the students on the trip were Miss Wilma Crabtree, art teacher, and Miss Lynn Mayer, German teacher.

Frosh assembly shows candidates

The freshman class election assembly will be held in the auditorium on November 2, with Elizabeth Streukins, student body vice-president, in charge.

The officers to be elected shall be president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer and two sergeants-at-arms.

Requirements for president will be a 3.0 over the previous school year. The GPA for other class officers shall be 2.5 over the previous school year.

As far as restrictions on campaigning; no posters, publications, or electioneering is permitted.

Student aides assist teachers

by Steph Daly

"I want to be a teacher," is a very common statement made by many high school students, and now the Future Teachers of America organization, under the Spanish society to induct, install twenty members

"Spanish National Honor society is mainly for giving recognition to students who have achieved a special level in Spanish," stated John Seymore, Spanish NHS adviser.

Inductions will be made at the end of the term, when grades come out. In order to be installed in the club, it is necessary to have a 3.5 grade point average in Spanish and to be a third, fourth, or fifth year student. Grades in other subjects are not important.

At an installation which will take place at either Clancy's Ice Cream Parlour or Farrell's Ice Cream Parlour, 20 to 25 new members will be taken in. Vice-president Ron Young will be promoted to president during the same ceremony, since President Ron Marrs was also holding an office in another club, which is against school rules.

"The meetings are somewhat restricted, so that they won't take up much of the students' time, and are primarily devoted to promoting interest in Spanish speaking countries and their culture. It's somewhat like the American Field Service in culture activities," explained Mr. Seymore.

Julian Amaya is co-adviser of Spanish NHS.

Highlight events require interest

"This year's Homecoming was a success in spite of its limited objectives," commented John Stuckey, activities director. "It could have been much better if there could have been an activities director to organize the event on a full-time basis."

Regarding the Homecoming as a tradition, it is doubted if it will ever catch on because proper facilities are needed. Without a stadium and facilities to host the alumni, the needed enthusiasm for Homecoming is not there.

"I have observed that Grant students don't really get enthused about any event unless it is unique to Grant," stated Mr. Stuckey. "Most schools have a Homecoming."

Homecomings will be continued in the future only if students indicate the desire that they do want a Homecoming.

direction of Mrs. Constance Person, English teacher, is making it possible for these students to find out what the work of the teacher really involves.

The program has to do with the job of aiding and assisting teachers, and is met under a voluntary basis of which students sign up and volunteer their time in order to help teachers at Fernwood and Hollyrood elementary schools.

Study halls, lunch periods and after school time is given up in order to work on extra projects by actually assisting the teachers.

"I think this is an excellent, excellent idea," commented Mrs. Person. "Many times young people have the romantic idea of the teacher's having such an easy job, but in this way the students can really find out what it is like with the many different problems that arise in the classroom."

Miss Vera Larson is in charge of the student aids at Fernwood, with Mr. Robert Fuller in charge at Hollyrood.

Volunteers aiding at Hollyrood include: Barbara Blossom, Susan Crookham, Barbara Mc-Laughtin, Marilyn Lieble, Martha and Nancy Parcel.

Concluding the list are Kirsten Boemer, Gina Wilcox, Kathy Perman and Muriel Buehler.

Fernwood volunteers are: Karolyn Carroll, Holly Armstrong, Rita Harris, Barbara Hylton, Jusy Kgai, and Kathy Olafson.

Also assisting on the Fernwood list are: Cathy Radford, Marilyn Hall, Pat Burns, Charlene Gearhart, and Patsy Pohlman.

Some of the students volunteered for Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, with others for Tuesdays and Thursdays. The times of when and where they should meet were discussed with the principals of each of the schools.

"This is when they find out if the teacher profession still interests them, besides being a great experience for each one, and as everyone knows, the best way to learn is only by experience," concluded Mrs. Person.
