

IF YOU PLAN to ski this winter, you will not have to sleep in the snow, accommodations are available.

THE BEST THING to ski on is snow, and Mount Hood has plenty of it.

Kathi's Ski Kapers

by Kathi Robinson

Wondering where to ski this winter besides down the hill in front of your house? Well, that is the purpose of the column—to inform you of places to ski in Oregon.

First on the list is Timberline Lodge, located on Mount Hood. The terrain is made up of 3 beginner slopes, 3 intermediate slopes, and 1 advanced slope. The longest run is approximately seven miles long. Three chair lifts, 2 rope tows and snow-cats equip the mountain for skiers. Sno-cats take skiers up to the 9,000 foot level for long runs down moderate slopes. The highest point on the mountain is 11,235 feet.

Next on the list is Mount Hood Meadows, located near Government Camp and Hood River. This mountain is equipped with 2 double chairs, 1 T-bar, and 2 rope tows. The terrain is made up of 1 beginner slope, 2 intermediate slopes, and 2 advanced slopes. The longest run is approximately 7,900 feet.

Two areas joined by lifts and trails provide the closest thing to a "ski circus" in Oregon are Multopor and Mount Hood Ski Bowl. Steep upper Mt. Hood Ski Bowl is Mt. Hood's best expert and intermediate slopes to ski on. The lower bowl is floodlit at night for night skiers. The terrain is made up of 5 beginner slopes, 3 intermediate slopes, and 2 advanced slopes. The longest run is approximately 2 miles. Equipped with 3 double chair lifts, 1 single chair lift, 1 T-bar, and 7 rope tows makes this area fun to ski.

Probably Oregon's best ski area for racers and experts is Mt. Bachelor, located 22 miles west of Bend. The season runs from November through May, the same as Timberline Lodge. The mountain is equipped with 3 chair lifts, 1 Poma, and 2 rope tows. The terrain is made up of 3 beginner slopes, 4 intermediate slopes, and 8 advanced slopes. The longest run is approximately one and a half miles long.

Other ski areas include: Hoodoo Ski Bowl, located near the Three Sisters Mountains, is equipped with 3 chair lifts, and 5 rope tows. Mount Ashland, located in Ashland, is equipped with 1 chair lift, 2 T-bars, 1 Poma, and 1 rope tow. Red Devil, located in Government Camp, is equipped with 3 T-bars; and Summit, which is located in Government Camp too, is equipped with 2 T-bars and 4 rope tows. Tomahawk Ski Bowl, located in Klamath Falls, is equipped with 1 Poma and 2 rope tows. Willamette, located in Eugene, is equipped with 1 chair lift, 1 T-bar, and 4 rope tows. Warner Canyon, located in Lakeview, is equipped with 3 rope tows. Taft Mountain, located in Heppner, has 1 T-bar, and 1 rope tow. Cooper Spur, located in Hood River, is equipped with 2 rope tows.

Juniors plan 'Rooter Buses'

Students! Are you down because you do not have any transportation to the football games? Well, have no fear, Rooter-Bus is here.

Rooter-Bus is a junior class-sponsored program which enables student not having transportation to the games to attend them for the sole price of 60¢ round trip.

Tickets for the Rooter-Buses can be purchased on Tuesdays and Thursdays in center hall, the week of the game.

On Fridays, a list will be posted in center hall which will tell how many buses are leaving from school that night. A number on the purchaser's ticket corresponds to the number of buses. If one has a number four on his ticket and only three buses are scheduled to transport students, these students can not be guaranteed seats.

These students can be at school before 7:30 p.m. on Friday if they want to take a chance on stand-by. Refunds for the extra students will be made the following Monday. Other purchasers, not attending, will not be granted a refund.

Frank Myers, junior class president and originator of the Rooter-Bus, hopes that it will work. Frank thinks this will be a success because of the great number of students who have volunteered.

Buses leave the front door at 7:30 p.m. and will drop students off in front of the place of the game. These students will also be picked up within 10 minutes after the end of the game at the same place they were dropped off and again let off in front of the school.

Job hunting hard; help now offered by Jenni Raies

Want a job and a good education at the same time? No problem, just see Dutch Kawasoe or Charles Randolph, Vocational Work Experience co-ordinators, in the room titled "Vocational Office," about a job of any kind.

Over 200 students have programmed for work so far this year and already 150 have jobs, with good prospects for the remaining fifty.

"Vocational Work Experience seeks to assist students who require work and who want to work by working corporation liaison between the school and the employer," explained Mr. Randolph, "thereby making it possible for students to gain experience in college and arranging a program for them to attend school and work at the same time."

Students wishing to apply for a job must first qualify for a state work permit, available to those 16 years of age or older. Then Mrs. Pat McAvay or Mr. Kawasoe will conduct an interview and evaluate experience, if any, and assist in the choosing of the correct and desirable employment.

Also counselors and teachers are helpful in arranging the students with this program to meet the requirements for a job. Some students work in the morning and attend school in the afternoon and vice versa, although the majority attend classes in the morning.

Several students travel quite far to work. Tektronix, a prominent Northwest electronics firm is a major Grant high employer which provides bus service to and from school for both shifts.

Last year was V.W.E.'s trial year; it was able to place students with the 120 different employers in the community and was considered successful.

Campus Life meetings started

An all-city kick-off dinner last Saturday started the new season for Campus Life, and its new advisors and officers.

Rollin and Joyce Boyce will advise this club which tries to establish an awareness of moral and spiritual values among student. Tana Marrs, co-vice-president, stated, "The purpose of Campus Life is to develop the four aspects of life: the social, mental, physical and spiritual."

Meetings, which help develop these aspects, are held at Jana and Laure Golden's house, 2009

N.E. Brazee. These meetings start at 7:30 p.m. and take place every other Wednesday with last Wednesday as the first.

Discussions, singing and humorous skits highlight a camp meeting with refreshments provided by various members.

Humorous skits might be presented by the new Campus Life officers. They are: Dave Poppinga, president; Tana Marrs and Jana Golden, co-vice-presidents; Lauree Golden, secretary; and Cindy Waldin, chaplain.
