

Dancers relive 'old days'

The annual Big Band Ball will be held Nov. 19 from 8 p.m. to midnight in the Community Center.

Dinner will be served from 8 to 9 p.m. in the Community Center cafeteria. "Last year, there was candlelight, food was served fast, and was hot, and good," said Kitty Sellman, secretary in Community Relations.

Although dinner was good last year, Pat Weverstad, cook, "just can't wait to get done and get out there and boogie."

The dance is from 9 p.m. to midnight, in the community center mall. The music will be provided by "The Rhythm Section" directed by LeRoy Anderson.

"The Big Band Ball makes you feel like you're back in the 30's," said Jim Roberts, Director of Student Activities. The mirrored ball twirling from the ceiling gives you an atmosphere of the ballroom dancing—and there are few places to ballroom dance around the area."

"The dance is enjoyable for the young and the young at heart," said Juanita Maylack, bookkeeper and secretary in student activities.

"My wife and I go simply because we enjoy it," said John Lobdell, business administration instructor.

"I have a wonderful time," said John Hakanson, president of the College.

Reservations can be made by calling or stopping by the Student Activities center. The number is 656-2631, ext. 340. Prices are $7 per person for dinner and dance; $4 for dancing only.

Sandy McBean caught up on her studies during a lull in questions and sales at the Arts and Crafts Fair held Nov. 9 in the Community Center. The lamp which she studied by was just one of the jute macrame items displayed. Exhibitors and the College student activities personnel expressed interest in another crafts sale to be held before Christmas.

Slides show CCC women

As part of her graduate work towards a master's degree in communications, Karen Lytle, public information assistant at the College, has developed a slide-tape presentation called "What If," to be shown as a part of Focus on Women's Reel Life program.

"The show portrays the experience of women at Clackamas. For instance, Bernie Nolan, counselor, is a former student. She went on, got her degree, and got married.

She had fears about coming back to Clackamas," said Lytle.

Other women sharing their views are Sherrie Whitmore, Juanita Knutz and Harriet Oldford. Harriet Nelson is the narrator between interviews and Galadriel Bressi is the art work for the show.

"The message is for younger women about the reality of today's world. They don't prepare to make it on their own. They think Prince Charming is still around to carry them off on a prancing white stallion. What the girls don't realize is that Prince Charming sometimes doesn't make a royal income and he can sometimes vanish," Lytle said.

Designed for the community relations office as a public information media tool, the presentation has been shown to both men's and women's groups and at a vocational conference sponsored by Lane Community College.

Marv Weiss, dean of community services, took the slide show to a conference in Portland and it has also been put on video tape to be shown in Alaska.

"It would be nice if students and faculty could see what the outside community is saying about the College and I think that the information in the show I think they should have," Lytle said.

The slide show will be presented at the College on Nov. 29, in the Community Center, room 117, at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.
