apple II computer

APPLE II It's here. The first computer designed specifically for home use. Thanks to a decade of rapid technological advances, a compact little instrument about the size of a portable typewriter and priced so it's practical for private use, has capabilities it would have taken a roomful of equipment that cost literally hundreds of thousands of dollars to equal just a few short years ago.

Why not be one of the first to have your very own home computer. All you need to make it work is an inexpensive portable cassette recorder and a TV (black and white is okay, but color's more fun). The computer comes pre-assembled. All you have to do is hook up a few wires, plug it in and you're ready for action. Years from now, when home computers are as common as telephones are today, you'll remember how much fun it was when you were the only person on the block who had one!

And just think how much easier it'll make things like your basic budget—not to mention scientific calculations, if that's what you're into. This little wonder comes with a program cassette so you can match wits with the machine in a fast game of Breakout. Or flip the cassette and watch your home computer run thru a series of color pattern demonstrations (that's if you have a color TV, of course). Then if you know how to program in Basic, you can make up your own programs ad infinitum.

If you don't know Basic, never fear! There are plenty of optional cassettes, that are as inexpensive as standard pre-recorded cassettes, to do all kinds of entertaining and useful things. Like keep up your check book balance and reconcile your records with the bank statement. (Won't it be fun when your computer catches a bank computer error!)

Home Computer System

Your computer can also be your private financial manager. It'll help you keep track of how much you're spending for housing, food, entertainment, clothes, transportation or any other category you want to take a look at. And think how much easier it'll make handling business expenses . . . or your income tax!

This jack-of-all-trades is a teacher too. It'll play simple math games with your kids (or more difficult ones with big kids). You get a high tone and a smile if you're right, a low tone and a frown if you blow it.

We could go on and on, but the best way to find out how great it is to own a home computer is to visit TEAM Electronics and try it. You'll like it.
