

Young people use art form to learn math, science skills at Milk Creek Little School

'It is the closer personalized school-home-community involvement that makes the school different from other choices available in education'

Photos by Lorraine Stratton

Similar to the pieces displayed in the library, this weaving nears completion at left. Above, cooperation is the key when creating art as a group, as instructor Gen Corbett and student Briane Dotson lend each other a helping hand.

