

Forensics students sponsor successful speech tourney

Speech students and their instructor helped Clackamas Community College sponsor a "national first" in the Tri-county Handicapped Speech Tournament held at the College on Saturday.

"Clackamas Community College did something really great for the community last week," said Frank Harlow, speech instructor and coordinator of the event. "It was really an inspirational day."

Six Portland-area handicapped high school students received full or partial tuition scholarships to local community colleges as place-winners in the speech tournament.

Barbara St. Mary, speech student at the College, wrote the script which allowed the tournament to receive federal funds through its organization and to fund tuition waivers awarded to tournament winners.

St. Mary and Harlow coordinated the tri-county tournament with College speech students from Sp 270, Projects in Public Speaking.

"All my students really worked hard to make the tournament run smooth," Harlow said. "I got a lot of good, positive vibrations from it." Harlow hopes to sponsor the tournament on an annual basis. College students also provided judging responsibilities for each category in the tournament.

"I was really touched when some of those kids got up there to speak," said Julia Chitty, one of the CCC students helping with judging the tournament. "They were so strong and the winners were really excited."

Chitty judged the speaking category for deaf students. She said even the students who were deaf spoke their speeches. "They really spoke strongly," she said.

The competition for handicapped high school students from Clackamas, Multnomah and Washington counties was divided into categories of orthopedically, hearing and visually impaired. The topic of the persuasive speaking competition was "Freedom from Handicaps."

Paul Danzer, Wilson High School; Susan Peterson, Madison High School; and Cindy Hayes, Monroe High School, earned first-place awards of full-year tuition scholarships to either Clackamas, Mt. Hood or Portland Community Colleges.

Second-place winners of one-term scholarships to the same community colleges were Sandy Fredrick, Clackamas High School; Rhett Wyatt, Centennial High School; and Susan Malloy, Monroe High School.

All of the scholarship winners were seniors.

Three baby raccoons are the latest addition to the John Inskip Environmental Learning Center on the College campus. The young bandits are being hand-fed a special formula every two hours by student volunteers.

ELC gains baby raccoons

With an ever-increasing variety of animals at the John Inskip Environmental Learning Center on the College campus, what would be more appropriate than three baby raccoons.

A county resident brought a female raccoon to the ELC, three weeks ago after discovering it under a house. When the animal was released in the ELC, she chased the baby ducks and the baby nutria and then disappeared.

Later, the same people apparently found three baby raccoons under the same house where they had found the female. Unfortunately, by then, the mother was long gone leaving the orphans to be fed by hand, according to Nora Hall College student.

Hall and Nan Clark, a former College student, were recruited to make sure the three cuddly bandits received needed nourishment -- a special formula prepared specifically for baby raccoons and obtained from a local veterinarian.

Goals set for support service

The Student Support Service will be serving the needs of the student by maintaining a reliable source file in the above areas and attempting to match these resources on an individual basis. This service (formerly the crisis program) will be in existence as of fall term registration, according to the Advisory Council. A prepared notice of Intent to Serve is to be delivered to the college and community later this month.

Proposed services will include:

emergency, short term, and semi-permanent housing, carpooling systems, a cooperative child care (no-fee) service and a peer-counseling service to supplement the existing professional counseling program. These programs will be offered to all students of Clackamas Community College.

A student survey and the official Intent to Serve will be mailed to returning and new students during the summer months according to the council.

Bookstore sets summer hours

The College's bookstore hours will go through changes after the four-day, 10-hour work week goes into effect in July.

The bookstore will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. on June 19 through 22 and June 26, 27 and 28. On June 29 and 30 it will be closed for annual physical inventory.

On July 3, 5 and 6 the bookstore will be re-opened from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Beginning July 7 it will be open 7 a.m. to 8 p.m., Monday through Thursday, through summer session.

Beginning Tuesday, June 6, and running through June 16 will be a book buy-back at the bookstore. There will be no buy-backs until after July 1 and then it would be to the approval of Doug Shannon, bookstore manager.

"I assume we will have some buy-backs after the end of the summer," Shannon said. "I would encourage everyone to come between June 6 and 16 for buy-backs."
