Student takes over post

Following the recent rash of resignations, the Student Government office has seen many of new faces, the most recent being, Beth Thompsen, newly appointed ASG secretary.

Majoring in history, Thompsen has found her new job to be "a little more involved than I thought it would be.'

"You just can't sit around and type minutes," she said. "You are immediately in-cluded, and expected to know a little bit of everything.'

Aware that filling the vacancy of the energetic Joanne McCauley, who is now a page the State Capitol, could be more than a little challenging, Beth stressed that there were pressures, but everyone was helpful and she is "learning quickly."

"I wish that I had a little more knowledge of meeting procedure, and government structure, but I am learning a lot.

Most people seem to think it's hard enough to deal with their parents or children at home. Yet, Della and Ginny Riggs are attending the college together in addition to seeing each other every evening. Ginny Riggs is Della's 18-yearold daughter.

Della is planning to graduate from the college in June with degree associate an business. Ginny plans to tran-sfer to University of Oregon next year, then to the Univer-sity of Washington to get her bachelor's degree in telecommunications

Don't call us

Students needing school closure imformation on bad weather days should listen to a local radio station, according to Joni Johnson, college switch-board operator. The college information center was swamped with calls relating to closures during the recent "ice storm" and prefers to avoid such incidents in the future.

"It puts an overload on everything," said Johnson.

Most local radio stations should have school closure in-formation by 5:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. for night classes here at the College

Drafting

The American Institute for Design and Drafting has awarded a certificate of excellence to the drafting department of Clackamas Community College According to Dave Madsen, drafting instructor and department chairman, the American Institute for Design and Draf-ting is the only professional organization in the U.S. for drafting Ginny says the main benefit of going to school with her mother is free transportation. Della says having Ginny around "is fun." Both are currently enrolled in currently Psychology 203 and plan to study together.

The only disadvantage, cording to Ginny, is that sometimes she feels her mother is "spying" on her. However, she quickly added, "she keeps me in line " me in line.

Della stated, "Not enough people take advantage of the college." Yet, it seems as though her family has, and will continue to take advantage of
