Friends needed

Friends In Need, a local group that services human needs, will meet at Kathy Shea's home Wednesday, Feb. 21 at 7 p.m. Shea wants persons who would be interested in working with Friends In Need contact her at 656-2995 or 632-4091.

Friends In Need was started by former College student Ken Shea, who died in January of cancer.

Read today

Parents, grandparents, and others who care for young children, are invited to a seminar titled "Read Today—for Tomorrow" Feb. 28, to 10 p.m. in the community center, room 117.

"Reading aloud to your preschool child is an investment in the future," according to Gale Shonkwiler, a part-time children's librarian.

Shonkwiler will provide guidelines for determining which books to read and purchase at each stage of a child's development. Group participation will be encouraged during the informal demonstration of the techniques and benefits of sharing books with children from birth through the preschool years.

Fee for the seminar is $1. For more information and registration, call 656-2631, ext. 208.

Noodles

A free spaghetti dinner is being offered for low income persons interested in learning more about Oregon Legal Services and help set program goals.

The dinner will be served at 6 p.m. with the advisory meeting following at 7:30 p.m. at the Oregon City View Manor Administration Building, 200 Longview Way, Oregon City.

Child care will be provided. For further information or transportation, phone 655-2518.

Any volunteers?

The Tri-County Respite Care program, which coordinates short term relief care of mentally retarded developmentally disabled individuals, has a great need for people to give care in their own homes or family homes for overnight and vacation situations.

Respite Care, located in the Aloha office of the Washington County ARC, serves families in Washington, Multnomah and Clackamas Counties.

Parents or guardians wishing a break, or respite, for a few hours, a weekend, or longer may also take advantage of the Respite Care program.

For more information on either becoming a volunteer, or using the program's services, call 642-1721 or 649-7185.

Board awards

The College board meeting on Feb. 14 was highlighted by the presentation of awards to several College and community members.

Brooks Jensen, community education instructor, received a certificate of achievement for prowess in the field of photography. Roger Smith, College women's track and field coach, received a special achievement plaque commemorating his expertise as a coach. Wayne LaFarge, former Clackamas County treasurer, received a special achievement plaque in recognition of his service in the county treasury office.

Andy Rice, College landscape architect, entered into a separate contract with the College in which he will continue to provide the College with landscaping services. The Board named the firm of ROMA as the prime college architect.

Kidnapped

KENT, Ohio (CH)—A Kent State University student wanting to avoid taking final exams "kidnapped himself" to another state, according to police here.

The 21-year-old student reportedly took a bus to Cleveland, and then another to Cincinnati where he stayed for three days before turning up in Lexington, Ky. He had then reported three men had kidnapped him for "apparently political reasons" but were unable to carry out their plans.

The Lexington police and the FBI, which were both investigating the alleged abduction, did not press any charges, but a Kent judge fined the student $750 and sentenced him to 90 days in jail for obstructing official business. The jail term and $500 of the fine were suspended. The final still awaits him.

Petition now

Any student planning on completing a degree or certificate program winter or spring term should file a petition to graduate and meet with a counselor to review transfer and admissions requirements for their particular program.

Petitions can be picked up at the Admissions window, located in the Community Center.

It is not too early to petition for spring term and any student planning to graduate winter term should contact the Admissions office at 656-2631, ext. 262, immediately.

Skill Olympics

On Friday the College will host the Clackamas County Regional Skills Contest. High school students from all over Clackamas County will compete in 10 skill areas.

The individual contests are being designed and managed by College instructors in their respective areas. Contest areas are marketing, coordinated by Mel Hostager; electricity/electronics, coordinated by Bob Lehman; drafting, Dave Madsen; welding, Clarence Lasley; job interview, Marv Thornley; automotive mechanics, Larry Noonan; business education, Pat Reinert; life science, Virginia Webber; mathematics, Jim Streeter and photography, John Bohan.

The purpose of the contest is to provide the students with exposure to competition.

College meets with codes

By Dean L. Selbert
Of The Print

The College is moving ahead of the other colleges and universities for being in compliance with the Handicap Rehabilitation Act of 1973, Section 504, according to John Hakanson, college president.

The act is federal legislation that was signed into law by former President Gerald Ford in June 1977. The act, Sections 503 and 504, states that no person shall be discriminated against on the basis of handicap in the areas of academics, employment or access to public buildings.

The College is doing more this year to comply with Section 504 and 503 by making the art building accessible to handicapped students. This includes installing an elevator and making the classrooms accessible. Construction on the art building is scheduled to be completed by the fall term, 1979 according to Hakanson.

Hakanson said there are many "hidden handicapped" students and that the College would like to be of service to these students.

"Many are not telling us of their disability, and they should. It is no disgrace to be disabled and there are many services that CCC can provide to the disabled students," Hakanson said.

Hidden handicaps are not as easily detected as many physical disabilities. Students with learning disabilities, for example, may go unnoticed and may not get the help they need.

He urged students with any kinds of handicaps to contact his office or the Handicapped Student Resource Center, located in Trailer D on campus.

The College is currently looking for a director for the Handicapped Resource Center, according to Larry Forsythe, human services director. Forsythe said that a director for the Resource Center should be found by the end of this week and by Monday the Center will be in operation. Forsythe requested that those handicapped students who have problems or needs contact him at 656-2631, ext. 244 or 317.
