

Focus on Women' plan full year agenda

Since the inception of the College's Focus on Women program, the emphasis has been to help women of all ages develop interests which will enable them to make choices and find a special kind of sup-

This fall's program continues that tradition with a variety of classes and workshops planned.

The program was begun by women volunteers on the college staff and has been operating for four years. The steering committee meetings are open to all interested members of the community.

Scholarships open for returnees

Second-year College students will have a chance to improve their financial picture by competing for one of five scholarships.

The College board recognized the need for second-year scholarships and authorized five full-year scholarships for returning and second-year students," said Dick Thompson, director of "Living your fullest life is a career in living," states the program philosophy. "Focus on Women recognizes that women who work in the home or out of the home are all interested in growing. We share the joy of learning. We are doing what we do with purpose, with enthusiasm, and spirit. Women together sharing the similarities and differences of their lives expand one another, helping each other reach decisions, adopt and commit to new goals, and support one another in the process of growth."

Below are the programs which have been planned for this fall. For more details, contact Carrie Heaton, 656-2631, ext. 212.

Weiss accepts bigger position

Marvin Weiss, former College dean of community services, has accepted the position of president of Northeastern Junior College, Sterling, Colo.

Weiss had been dean of Community Services and Community Education at Clackamas since 1975, starting as director of community services in 1965.

During Weiss' service at the College, the department he headed was expanded to include formal cooperative agreements with each of eight high school districts in the area.

The National Community Education Association honored Weiss with their Man of the Year award in 1978 for outstanding service in the field of community education.

Weiss and his wife, Marlys, are looking forward to their new experience in Sterling where he will be over-seeing a school which boasts a population of approximately 3,500 students, 18 buildings and a traditional stance.

The new president said he hopes to bring the services and resources of the college to the community of Sterling, Colo., in a more personal way. His open-door policy and team approach should give him a head start in achieving this goal.

Center plans new year

The Handicapped Resource Center on campus has new plans for the coming year. The center now has two full time workers on staff in addition to volunteer and work-study students who are available on a part-time basis.

According to Cathleen Jones, resource center coordinator, the center will be able to help many more students and community residents than it has in the past.

"About one out of 10 students here at the College are handicapped in some way," she explained. "We are here to provide our services and to meet their individual needs."

The services provided by the center include: note takers, tutors, tapers, interpreters, readers, exam assistance, mobility attendants, registration assistance, campus orientation tours, special education equipment and study labs. For information on any of the above services, contact the HRC coordinator, in Trailer D.

Doctor available on campus

For medical assistance and advice, the new College doctor will fill the bill without emptying your pockets.

Ronald W. Powell, D.O., will be available at the Student Health Center, Tuesdays from 10 to 5 p.m., and Wednesdays from 8 to 10 a.m.

Powell graduated from the University of Oregon with a master's degree in Developmental Biochemistry, after which he attended the Chicago College of Osteopathic Medicine where he graduated in 1978. Powell then returned to Oregon and spent his internship at Eastmoreland and Emanuel hospitals. He is now setting up an office in the Willamette Plaza in West Linn, specializing in family practice and obstetrics.

financial aid. "Somehow, we need to get the second-year students' attention to make them aware that the aid is here. We've never had it before," Thompson added.

The purpose of the Outstanding Sophomore Tuition Scholarship is to recognize and encourage academic achievement and community service by returning students attending the College.

The scholarship is not limited to those who received scholarships in their first year. The criteria is academic ability and school and community service. The deadline for submission of applications is Oct. 29. For more information, call the financial aid office.

has done some kayaking and has spent some time camping with his wife, Nancy, and six-month old daughter, Brooke. He also paints mostly "water-colors and wildlife," he said.

Powell's services are free of charge to students and staff of the College. Appointments may be made by calling the Student Health Center secretary, ext. 250.

Night video class offered

Don Zavin's "best hope" will be instructing a fall term night course in video production. The class is to "remove some of the mystique surrounding the media and make it more understandable to the layman."

Earning credits for such courses as "Fast Break," an inside look at the Trailblazers, documentaries for KATU and KSN television in San Francisco, and an award-winning special on drug abuse for CBS, Zavin may prove the right man for the job.

Describing his teaching methods as "practical," Zavin explained that theory will be incorporated into the learning process using the "hands on" method.

Every student will be encouraged to do all jobs that are required in video production," Zavin said.

Aside from his new class, he is currently working on both audio and video projects.

Introduction to Video Production will be the first in a three-term sequence. The class will be offered on Wednesday evenings from 7-10 p.m. in the McLoughlin Hall video studio.
