ARTISTIC EXPRESSION—The combined work of art society members, art faculty, and other people have caused a gallery to be a reality in the College art center.

"We just couldn't have done it without the people upstairs," said Jeanette Heisler, gallery manager. "We put this together in about seven days and everybody really worked hard."

The current display features the work of the College students and faculty. It's offerings include many paintings and drawings as well as ceramics, jewelry, and other things. It is located in a former kiln room on the first floor.

Many people stopped in to view the art gallery. "There have been more people than we expected," said John Brittingham, art society president. "It has been quite steady all day." Photos by Sue Hanneman.

Big Band sound performed

The ninth annual Clackamas Community College Stage Band Festival will bring together more than 50 high school bands, guest artists and the College jazz ensemble for concerts and competition on March 13 through 15.

The festival activities begin on March 13, at 8 p.m. with a "Sounds of the Big Bands" concert in the Randall Hall Gym. The free concert is sponsored by the Musicians Trust leaders as Artie Shaw, Skitch Henderson, Woody Herman and Charlie Barnett. Pugh, 25, has been playing the trumpet professionally since he was

16. Pugh's professional experience includes time with several Los Angeles-based show and studio bands. Pugh and Lanphere also have toured internationally with the 20-piece band and 120-voice choir of Bethesda Christian College. school portion of the festival starts on March 14 at 1 p.m. and continues through 6 p.m. The competition resumes on March 15 at 8 p.m. and lasts until 6 p.m.

Media class offered

If you're an up and coming journalist striving for more knowledge in the vast field of mass communications, or just fascinated by all the forms of the media we come into contact with each day, the College will be offering a new course, "Introduction to Mass Communications," spring term. William Flechtner, a journalism adviser at Milwaukie High School, will be teaching the course which will cover many facets of the media, including newspapers, television, radio, magazines and radio. Students won't need to worry about the cost of books for the class, as no textbooks will be needed, according to Flechtner.

"We will actually be using the various forms of media for study, so no text will be necessary," Flechtner said.

Flechtner also indicated that student involvement will be essential in the class.

"The course will not be just head work as students will be involved in some type of a final project like making a television commercial or giving a presentation about some form of the media," he said.

"Introduction to Mass Communication" will be held Wednesday evenings from 7-10 p.m. (not Monday evenings, as stated erroneously in the spring term class schedule). The class is worth three units of College credit.

Fund and features 18 local professional musicians playing the tunes of Tommy Dorsey, Benny Goodman, Glenn Miller and other big band era groups.

Competition in the high

At 8 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, the top high school bands will join with guest artist Don Lanphere and Jon Pugh of Wenatchee, Wash., and the College jazz ensemble for concerts in Randall Hall Gym.

High schools have entered from Oregon, Washington, Idaho and British Columbia.

Admission charge for the day events is $2 per person, and for the evening concerts, $3 per person.
