

ASG meeting results

Elections for two student senators were held at the last ASG meeting. The positions became open when two senators resigned earlier this month.

Three candidates for the two jobs were at the Nov. 20 meeting. The winners were Susy Ryan and Mike Snook. The third nominee was Brian Welsh.

Prior to the elections, the nominees made speeches before the assembly, outlining their credentials and goals.

Said Ryan, "We need better contact between the student government and The Print. If they got involved more, there wouldn't be all these hassles." The other new senator, Snook, said, "I think there's a lack of participation in this school, and I'd like to help. I know what the other students' needs are. Number one is money. We need to help them."

The two positions became open when Tim Frazier and Mike Gardner resigned for personal reasons.

Team shows excellence

The triumphant speech team returned home with their arms full of awards as they ripped third place from the jaws of fourth at the Lower Columbia "Smelt Classic" at Longview, Wash., Nov. 21 and 22. Two speakers came home with awards.

Randy Evans earned a first place trophy with a speech on the usefulness of comic books for both educational and monetary purposes. Tracy Watson snatched third with a speech on time travel.

"We did pretty dang good," exclaimed Tracy Watson, an award winner.

Edward Matthew Coyne performed the impossible (or dang close to it) by getting into the finals for the second tournament in a row. Coyne went to finals in both oratory and impromptu.

"That's terribly (dang) hard to do," said gutsy Frank Harlow, the speech coach. Susy Ryan also reached finals with her speech on handwriting analysis.

The team took third place out of eight junior colleges. Mt. Hood and Portland C.C. slipped in front of them for first and second. Out of 18 people at the tournament from the College, 10 were attending their first tournaments for the College.

"We have an outstanding crop of rookies," the man with guts (Harlow) said.

"This is a great way to finish a term," said Harlow, "People are going to have to reckon with the mighty power of Clackamas Community College in the future."

St. Helen's ash — Potter's dream

While most of us find the vitality of Mt. St. Helens disturbing and discomforting, Les Tipton, instructor of ceramics at the College has taken full advantage of the volcanic materials so generously spread across the Northwest.

Tipton received more than 3,000 pounds of the fine white ash from the City of Kelso, Washington earlier this month. He is storing his "booty" near the art department. The ash, you see, makes an excellent ceramic glaze.

But Tipton's enthusiasm is not limited to the economic benefits. "Local potters usually attempt to take advantage of local materials. The materials we have received from Kelso are mostly glass former and aluminum with a small amount of iron oxide. It's the oxide that creates the color character of the glaze. We have found that the results of using ash from various towns in the area are quite different," smiled Tipton.

Tipton claims that, in essence, Yakima glaze is different from Kelso glaze is different from Hillsboro glaze...you get the point.
