

Staff photo by Ramona Isackson

Sean Carlson became the latest member of the ASG executive council yesterday, as he was elected Vice President.

ASG elects vice prexy

By J. Dana Haynes
Of The Print

Sean Carlson was elected Associated Student Government vice president Tuesday at a special ASG meeting. He will take over the job that was vacated last month by Neva Barker.

Running for the job were Cindy Langly, Joe Bostick, Walt McCallister and Sean Carlson, and voting was open to all ASG members. However, a nominating committee had already chosen Carlson as its candidate, prior to the election.

The committee consisted of the ASG Executive Council and Senate Representative Paul Lemarr. This group interviewed each of the nominees in advance. ASG President Eric Etzel explained that the nominating committee members chose Carlson because they felt he would "mesh well" with the existing Executive Council.

Said Etzel, "We felt that for the Executive Council to work with somebody, they'd have to know him better than they could from a two-minute speech."

Joe Schweizer, assistant to the president, said, "We assumed that our nomination would give Carlson an edge. But it's important that the council works well together."

The council is made up of President Etzel, Assistant to the President Schweizer, Business Secretary Cindy Vetter, ASG Secretary Cherlynn Clark, Media Director Tom Simmons, Administrative Assitant Don Vitto, Activities Director Gail Schmidt, and then--Art Director Daryl Woods.

At the meeting, each of the candidates was given two minutes in which to explain why he or she was running for the office. Present at the meeting were Carlson, Mc-

Callister and Bostick. Cindy Langly did not attend.

McCallister and Bostick are currently senators. In his impromptu speech, McCallister said, "My goal would be constitutional revisions, also getting the clubs' bookwork up to date. I'll be working just as hard, if not harder, than I am now." McCallister is a Life Scout and has partaken in "church activities."

Bostick was informed in advance that Carlson was the nominating committee's choice, and semed resigned to their decision. "I'm happy with my position now," said Bostick.

Each of the nominees was informed in advance that the committee favored Carlson's nomination.

Carlson's goals and plans were outlined in his speech. "The country as a whole is moving towards a crux. As vice president, I'd like to see the feasibility of taking the ownership of the bookstore out of the hands of those who own it and put it in the hands of a studnet co-operative. There is no competition now, so we can't compete for prices," said Carlson. When asked what prior knowledge or experience he had, Carlson said, "I was an FFA officer and was active in high school government. I also went to Boy's State."

Carlson said that he has various goals for his new position. "I'd really like to get going on the reduced fare idea for Tri-Met. I'd also like to see the library opened on Saturdays," he said.

Carlson is active in the College's Theater Department. He played the Gentleman Caller in last term's production of The Glass Menagerie and landed the role of Dick Christie in the current show, Play It Again, Sam. His major is undeclared.

Are you a people watcher? A student of the actions and interactions of the rank and file?

Here is a chance to apply your observations and put to work your special talents.

Feature, the campus literary magazine, is now accepting submissions of photos, drawings, short stories and poetry on the subject of People.

Leave your submissions at Student Publications, Trailer B, or contact Ramona Isackson, Feature editor, 657-8400, ext. 309.

