

Staff photo by Duane Hiersche

THE WEATHER COOPERATED last Friday as the college Inter-varsity Christian Fellowship group held a free car wash. Here, one of 85 vehicles is being washed.

Overspending leads to layoffs in College cafeteria

By J. Dana Haynes
Of The Print

The College Food Services department has laid off two employees and cut back cafeteria hours in an attempt to eradicate a $28,000 overrun in their 1980-81 budget.

Norm Grambusch, head of the cafeteria, said that Ruth Sterns and Gloria Franklin have been laid off, effective March 1. Also, Karen Collum has had her hours reduced by one fourth.

Bill Ryan, dean of college services, explained that the auditor's report on last year's budget revealed the overrun. During that year, the cafeteria made a total of $239,502. This was $28,000 less than the amount spent on operating expenses.

Because the cafeteria is a self-sufficient entity, it receives no funds from the Associated Student Government.

In terms of actual changes, the cafeteria will now be open from 7 a.m.-5 p.m. Prior to this, the area closed at 7 p.m. In addition, full breakfasts will be discontinued.

"We ran quite a few surveys," Ryan said, "and discovered that only an average of 8.5 full breakfasts were being served per morning. This made the costs prohibitive." Another change in service is that hamburgers will not be available until 10:30 a.m.

"We didn't want to lay off any employees, but we felt this was the only way to cut costs without raising prices too high," Ryan said. Each of the cafeteria personnel makes approximately $8 per hour.

"One week isn't enough time to tell for sure," Ryan said, "but so far it looks like the services haven't been cut significantly, and sales haven't gone down. Hopefully, no more changes will be necessary."

Hakanson ponders raise in tuition

By Alison Hull
Of The Print

College President Dr. John Hakanson addressed the Associated Student Government at last week's meeting, regarding the possible tuition increase which could take place during the 1982-83 fiscal year.

"We do not have as much money left over to carry us into next year as we'd hoped," Hakanson said. "A tuition increase will be a way of boosting College revenue."

This announcement came on top of the Oregon legislature's decision to cut back revenues for community colleges by 9.1 percent. "If we increase part-time tuition by $18 and full time by $10, the College may see an estimated gain in revenue of $90,000 to $95,000," Hakanson said.

Dave Buckley, student programs specialist commented on the eagle painting above the fireside lounge entrance. "We're getting a lot of negative feedback on the eagle," Buckley said. "Some faculty members felt it wasn't worth the money."

"We'd like to get some reactions from students to see how they like or dislike it and if the majority of the students don't like the painting, maybe we can take it down and ask the Art Advisory Board what to do with it," Buckley said.

In other business, there were some complaints about the radio in the CC mall. Daphne Stone, Art Director for ASG said, "Someone took an unofficial survey of students to see what station they'd prefer to listen to and most of them said KGON."

The ASG passed a motion to conduct a survey of the students in the CC mall as to what radio station they would like to listen to.

In other business, the ASG denied the speech team their request of $1,212. "The problem was we just don't have enough money in our budget," said John Schaffer, liaison officer for the senate.

Uris running for council seat

Dr. Joe Uris, who teaches sociology at the College, announced Tuesday that he will run for election to the Portland City Council. Uris will be running for the seat held by Commissioner Mildred Schwab.

Uris, 41, said that concerns about the city's leadership prompted him to file for election. Uris was President of Portland State University from 1966-67, but has never held a general public office.

As reported in The

Another guest speaker at the meeting was Dave McTeague, a Democratic candidate for the U. S. Senate. McTeague talked about his candidacy and regarded his opponent Denny Smith as a "hypocrite" and a "fluke." (See story, page 3).

Oregonian, Uris feels that "Things have reached a point where it is possible for the city to go two ways. With the economic situation that Oregon is in now, the city could be devastated. The council has to take active leadership in promoting a widely diversified mix of job opportunities."

Uris feels that several changes could take place and would strive to make them should he be elected. He feels that members of the Portland Development Commission should be elected, to make them responsible to the voters. The members of the commission are currently appointed by the mayor.

Uris also feels that a civilian review board should exist to review complaints against the police and recommend disciplinary actions. He is also advocating a 25 percent cut in pay for city council members. "The people are taking it on the chin. So should they," he said.

A spiritual standpoint on economics

Page 3

Aging delegation brings discussion to campus

Page 4