Nastari, Schaller elected to ASG offices

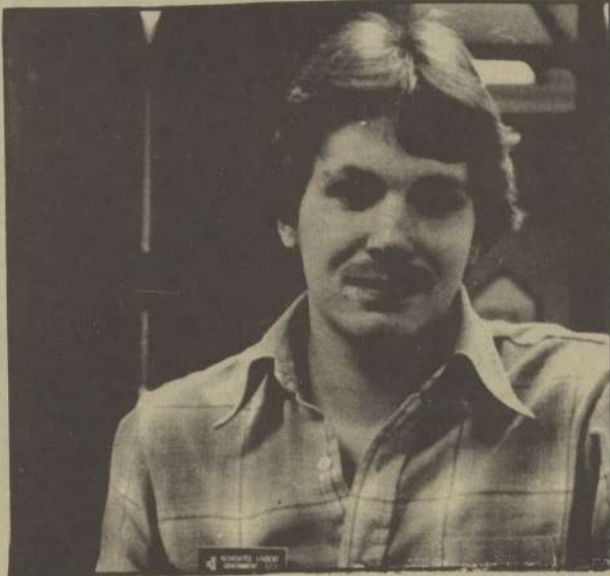

Paul Nastari has been elected President, and Jay Schaller Vice-President, of the 1982-83 Associated Student Government. Nastari collected 78 votes, and Schaller received 51. There were 107 votes cast.

Nastari ran unopposed for the office. "It was kind of disappointing to me," he said. "It shows the lack of student concern this year."

Nastari is a business major, and next year will be his third year at the College. Schaller is a Special Education major. He has been attending the College since 1980.

"There wasn't a highly contested presidential campaign this year," Student Activities Director Debbie Baker said. "At one point there were three people running, but two dropped out of the race. Paul has indicated that he wished someone was running against him."

Schaller is a victim of cerebral palsy. Although he was unavailable for comment, Baker said, "I think Jay is going to have to use his skills and get people to help with his duties, but he's very capable of doing his job. We've had handicapped students before and there were no problems."

The elections will be confirmed at tomorrow's ASG meeting. Nastari and Schaller will take their positions during the next two weeks. "We changed the rules so that this year's officers will be able to help the new ones get started in their offices," Baker said.

This year's President and Vice-President are Sam Crosby and Susy Ryan, respectively.

With the recent changes in the ASG constitution, the Vice-President will assume the responsibilities of the business manager, along with the traditional roles.

Another change in the constitution states that there will be ten senators next year, as opposed to 20 this year.

Nastari will be on the nomination committee for the senators.

"Hopefully, the nomination committee will weed out the less desirable people running for senate," Nastari said. "We should have a good breed of senators next term."

Nastari and Schaller are both senators this year.

Of The Print

Dan Tuck, a former member of the Associated Student Government of the College, was shot while attempting to stop a robbery last Friday. He is listed in good condition at Willamette Falls Hospital.

According to the Oregon City Police, Tuck, 18, is employed at the Hilltop Texaco gas station in Oregon City. Friday night, Tuck and another clerk, Ken Morris, were held at gun point by a masked man, who demanded their money. Morris apparently handed over less than $200. Tuck refused to cooperate, and the assailant ran. When Tuck gave chase, a second masked man shot him in the abdomen. Both assailants escaped.

There are no suspects at this time, according to police. According to Willamette Falls Hospital, Tuck will probably be held under observation until the end of the week.

College graduate killed in accident

Michael Marty, a welding technology major who graduated from the College last term, was killed in a hit-and-run accident last Saturday according to the Clackamas County Sheriff's office.

Marty, 24, was struck by an unknown vehicle while he was standing beside a friend's truck, to help fix a mechanical problem. The hit-and-run vehicle fled the scene without stopping, heading north on highway 43. The year and model of the car is not known, but the sheriff's department said it may be a gold car.

The accident took place just north of Lake Oswego, at 12:20 a.m., on April 24.

Marty was taken by ambulance to Meridian Park Hospital, in Portland, where he died a short time later.
