SS cuts push student into college

By Darla J. Weinberger

Many graduating high school students who will be depending on Social Security to help with college expenses face losing this income, unless they are enrolled in college by May 1.

The new Social Security regulations took effect this week, and require that all students 18 to 22 be enrolled in 12 credit hours of college courses to receive Social Security benefits next fall.

These new changes have cut the number of months students will receive Social Security. Even though students may be enrolled in school, they will not receive checks for the months of May, June, July, and August. The September check will be cut back 25 percent and will be cut back 25 percent each year until Social Security is phased out for students 18 to 22 years old.

Robin Luper is one of many students attending both high school and the College in order to receive their Social Security after they finish high school.

Luper has been receiving Social Security for 12 years because of her step-father's death. She is depending on this for her college education. "It is a major part of our family income," Luper said.

"I really wanted to graduate with my (high school) class but there are some requirements I had to complete to do so," Luper said. "I couldn't just quit high school and go to college."

Besides going to high school and the College, Luper also works at the Holiday Inn in Wilsonville as a waitress. "The only day I have to myself is Friday," Luper said.

"Right now I'm taking easy classes," she said. Her classes are Theater Makeup, First Aid, Women in Films, Typing and Study Skills. Luper attends high school from 7:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and goes to college on Mondays and Tuesdays from 7:30 to 10:00 p.m. On Wednesday she works from 6 to 11 p.m. and 8 hours on Saturday and Sunday.

Women Job Hunters workshop scheduled

The second of two "Women Job Hunters" workshops will be offered at the College from 9 a.m.-3 p.m., May 15, in the Community Center, room 117.

The sessions will focus on the job hunt, budgeting in reduced circumstances, stress management, and other survival tips for the unemployed. An information and referral expert will be on hand to counsel participants on programs and agencies available to help.

Featured speakers include Sue Jacobs, career development specialist, Marlene Stewart, Portland financial consultant, and Sharon Howard, hypnotist and counselor.

The event is co-sponsored by the Career Development and Placement Center and Women's Special Programs at the College. There is no charge for this workshop, to be held in Community Center 117.

Forensics team competes

The College's speech team took second place at last week's tournament at Portland Community College. Mt. Hood came in first.

Coach Frank Harlow's team dominated several categories at the Friday-Saturday meet. Mike Nettelman was a finalist in the "Sales" category. Ed Coyne was a finalist in Impromptu, and Teresa Svatos also was a finalist in Oratory.

Linda Perkins and Karl Nelson combined their talents to take a second place in Dual Interpretation.

Probably the best effort for the College's team was by Perkins, Harlow said. Besides the dual interp, she also took first place in the Expository category and a second in Oratory.

Car accident near College

There was a one-car accident last night, directly in front of the Beaver Creek entrance to the College.

Jacqueline Frent Rothchild of Mulino was driving her Toyota pickup when she apparently lost consciousness. Her truck slid into the ditch. Frent Rothchild sustained a slight neck injury and possible whiplash. Her children, Sarah, approximately five years old, and an infant boy, were not hurt.

The three members of the family were rushed to Willamette Falls hospital, in Oregon City. They were held for observation, and released within the hour.

Peru trip canceled

Dr. Angela Ayers, a teacher at Portland State University, has canceled her field trip to Peru. The venture was originally scheduled to take place from June 16 through July 6, and any students interested in studying that country were invited.
