

Failures of College, community

Staff photo by Duane Hiersche

NATIONALS QUALIFIER, Mike Bolf wrestles his opponent.

Photo by Bill Symes

LINDA BARR, COLLEGE graduate returned to Clackamas with the script of "Not Anymore," the winter term production.

for change.
 In the men's cross
 ranked second, to later
 nation.
 me to be proud of
 ASG and Karen Prouty
 representative to the state
 ing hours into insuring
 aty colleges.
 ing former student at the
 with a script the play
 out a young single nes of dating, and was an, wrote the play based herself and her sisters.
 department perform-
 later term production.
 the Animal Science
 After, giving the College
 r wanced facilities in the f th

More problems laid ahead for the College as the Oregon legislature ended its six-week special session on March 1 striking all the state's community colleges with a 9.1 percent slice in the budgets.

The College cafeteria also found itself in trouble as they resorted to laying off employees in an attempt to eradicate a $28,000 overrun in their 1980-81 budget.

College grappler Nathan Winner traveled to Worthington, Minnesota to capture second place in the National Junior College Athletic Association Wrestling Championships.

Student approved changes in the ASG constitution by a 70-17 margin in April. According to the changes, president and vice-president are the only two elected executive positions, with the rest being appointed. The number of senators has also been cut.

Controversy arose in the ASG as some members failed to fill the requirements of their positions. The situation was resolved with the resigning of four ASG members, and others being put on probation.

Chris Edwards, former Moonie and author of "Crazy For God," visited the College to relate the horror he went through as a member of the Unification Church. Edwards told about the quick brain washing techniques used, and outlined how to avoid Moonie recruiters.

ASG had a tragedy befall them as Senator Dan Tuck became a shooting victim. Tuck was in pursuit of an assailant who had just robbed the gas station he was working at. Tuck survived the injuries.

Four days after the Tuck shooting, there was an attempted kidnapping on campus in the Clairmont parking lot. No suspects have been arrested.

Tuition, once again, was raised beginning summer term. It has been raised from $170 to $180 per term for full-time students, and from $17 to $18 per credit hour for part-time students.

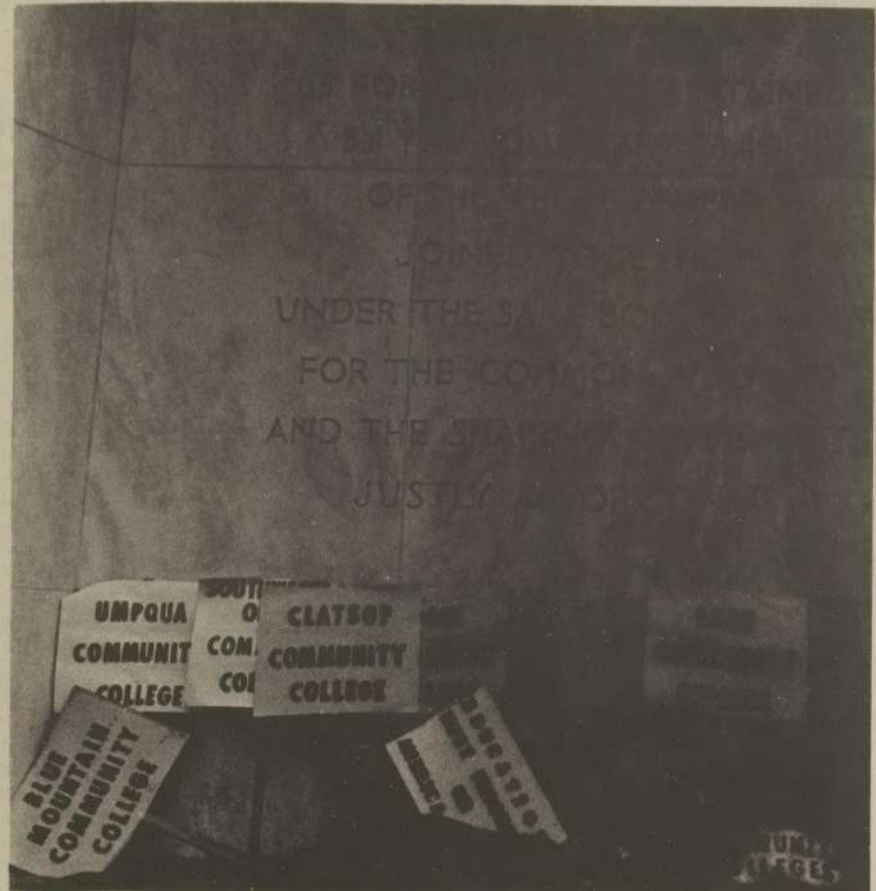

The College's speech team earned medals in a national competition.

A question has been raised as to whether national competition for athletes should be dropped. The situation has not been resolved (story on page 1).

In the area of national competition, the men's track and field team sent a record number of athletes to the nationals. Eleven members of the squad went to the nationals to come back with an 11th in the nation title.

These are just a few of the biggest stories that have been covered in The Print over the past year.

Staff photo by Duffy Coffman

OREGON COMMUNITY COLLEGE students joined together to rally against state budget cuts.

