Competition begins soon for the Outstanding Sophomore Scholarship, ac-cording to the Financial Aid Office. The deadline for entry is Friday, Oct. 22. "The scholarship is one of "The scholarship is one of the highest scholastic honors on campus," Financial Aid Of-ficer Scott Fischer said. It will be awarded to five students and consist of full tuition private for three terms, equalwaivers for three terms, equaling $540.

To be eligible for the scholarship, an applicant must be a second-year student at the College, have accrued 45 credit hours or more credit hours or more (Sophomore status) and carry a grade point average of 2.5 or better better.

The scholarship was created in 1979 to "provide outstanding sophomore students with an acknowlege-ment," Fischer said. "It also recognized adademic achievements and community

When it was instituted, the purpose was to recognize returning students and offer an incentive to continue their education at the College.

In past years, there has been a substantial number of applicants, Fischer said, "Last year, several dozen people ap-plied."

Petitions for the scholar-ship can be obtained in the Financial Aid Office, in the Community Center. Once completed, the application should be returned along with two letters of recommendation (preferably from someone in the education field) and a copy of the student's transcript. That can be obtained through the registration office. During the week of Oct.

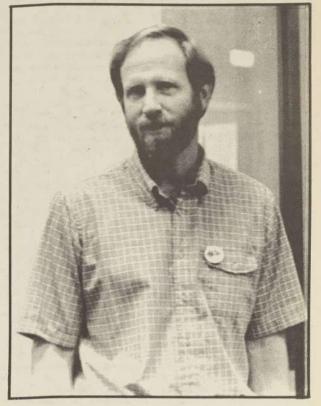

25, the hopefuls will be screened. The money will go toward this year's tuition and the winner will receive a reimbursement check for the current semester

While this is an advan-tageous award, Fischer pointed that it is not the only scholarship available to students at the College. The Financial Aid Office currently has applications for:

--Home Orchar-dist/Food Producing Trees Scholarship; a full-term scholarship for second-year horticulture students with a minimum GPA of 2.0. Deadline is Oct. 22.

--Oregon State Sheriffs' Association Scholarship; a $500 bequest for se-cond year law enforcement students. Deadline is Oct. 22.

--Oregon City Business and Professional Women's Club; a full tuition award for second year women students. Recipient must be a resident of Clackamas County with a minimum GPA of 2.5, and must be currently enrolled at the College

ASG meeting introduces officers

The Associated Student Government meeting that took place last Thursday, Oct. 7, concentrated on three subjects. One was on the blood drive, taking place Friday, Oct. 15 in the Community Center from 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Last year, 273 total units (pints) of blood were collected in the three blood drives. One was held each term. This year's goal is to collect 485 units of blood, if three drives are scheduled. Giving blood only takes six to 10 minutes and may save up to three lives per unit, Red Cross Representative Dennis Donin explained. If anyone would like to donate, he or she should sign up in the ASG office. There will also be announcements made in classes

In further business, Oregon City Public School Superintendent Chuck Clem-mons discussed his views of Proposition 3. Students who wish to vote can register in the Student Activities Office. On Oct. 18 at noon, there will be a Candidates' Fair, where candidates for public of-fice will be giving their views on the uncertainty factor.

the upcoming election. Dean of Students Jim Roberts discussed getting students involved in college ac-tivities. The Student Activities Office has brochures on activities going on on-campus.

Candidates express views with students

By Karl Gassaway Of The Print Politics hits Clackamas Community College on Monday Oct. 18, as the College hosts a Candidates' Fair.

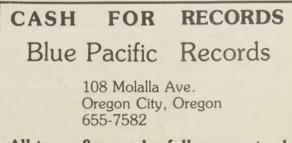

The dual purpose of the fair is to allow candidates for public offices a chance to speak and to help the College's students become better informed about the upcoming elec-tion. The fair has been held the past seven years and has been quite successful in recruiting candidates, due to "the College's reputation of being concerned," Associated Stu-dent Government Activity Director Stephen Vohs said.

Several candidates have been invited to this year's fair, including candidates for Congress Ruth McFarland and Denny Smith, candidates for state Senate Walter Brown, Larry Burniqut, Joyce Cohen, Dick Smelser, Steve Stainkowitch and Joe Davis, and candidates for Governor, Ted Kulongoski and Victor Atiyeh. It is hoped that the ma-jority of these candidates will accept the invitation.

Vohs feels the fair will have an impact on the "voting feelings" of the College's students in November. "A good kick in the pants is what students need to start voting," Vohs said. "Students need to listen to these candidates, read literature and just become in-formed. I feel the Candidates Fair will meet part of this reponsibility."

The Candidates Fair will be advertised in the "Today", "The Print", "The Oregonian", "Enterprise Courier", and hopefully on television. There is a chance that a television crew may be on hand during the fair. Students are urged to attend. People of the community and others interested are also invited
