Local schools hold education event in mall

By Doug Vaughan

The College will be involved in a Clackamas County Education Day Saturday, Oct. 30 in Clackamas Town Center.

Nine other school districts will be participating in the event scheduled from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Those participating will include Clackamas County Education Service District (ESD), Oregon City, Canby, North Clackamas No. 12, Gladstone, Estacada, Carus and Redland School Districts.

The booths will be located on the lower level of the mall and will stretch from Nordstrom's to Meier and Frank. Information on the schools will be available at the booths and each district is asked to concentrate on a specific curriculum area. There will also be tests for the audience that visits the booths.

The College's booth will contain brochures concerning the different programs offered. The College's Public Information Officer Kevin McMurdo hopes to have students behind the booths rather than someone from the administration.

In addition to the booths, there will be performances going on throughout the day. Most of the performances will consist of band and choral groups from the various schools.

Communication and Public Relation Supervisor for Oregon City Schools Bob Purscelley was the organizer of the event. Along with a steering committee, Purscelley is also heading any new developments of the day. The only downfall so far with the event, which hopes to materialize into an annual event, is that they did not get all the major school districts in Clackamas County that they wanted to.

One reason for the event, McMurdo feels, is to show the public school districts work together and are not just a series of isolated units.

An example of this is the ESD, which is participating in the Education Day. A main function of the ESD is to help cut costs and make purchases cost-efficient. They also provide service for the handicapped, courier service, printing and purchasing services for all the schools in Clackamas County.

The main reasons the College is participating is for exposure. "It will let people know the college cooperates with the school districts. The College looks at education as life-long," McMurdo said.

Nastari angry with Candidates Fair results

By J. Dana Haynes

The good news on the blood drive, bad news on the Candidates' Fair and plans for Halloween Week dominated last week's Associated Student Government meeting.

The Candidates' Fair was held to allow candidates for public office a forum upon which to speak and meet their adversaries. The main goal behind the Fair was to give the students of the College a chance to hear those they will, or will not, vote for in November.

"I was very disappointed in the conduct of the people at the Fair," ASG President Paul Nastari said. Student attendance was less than expected, and heckling disturbed those who did attend. "There were representatives from the media there and I think we gave them a pretty bad example of what Clackamas Community students are like," Nastari said.

He also wrote a letter of comment, which ran in the Oct. 13 issue of The Print. The letter referred to the Fair as a fiasco, and Nastari wrote "... most students aren't willing to listen, or shut-up so others can."

One student, who wished to remain anonymous, felt that Nastari was wrong to chastise the student body. "The ASG is supposed to serve the students. If most students don't want this sort of thing (a Candidates'

Fair), then they shouldn't have to sit through one."

Other students also complained about the location of the Fair, which was held in the Community Center Mall, a popular place for students to meet and relax.

In other business, the once-per-term blood drive, held on Friday, Oct. 15, garnered 79 units, or pints, of blood for Red Cross of Oregon. Of the donors, 23 were first-timers and 28 others were deferred for either health or dietary considerations. A total of 107 people participated in the blood drive, the fruits of which will be broken down into component parts and distributed throughout Oregon hospitals.

Steve Vohs, ASG activities director, announced the schedule of events planned for the week of Halloween.

The All Saints' Eve celebration include the local rock band "Hit and Run" playing in the Community Center Mall on Tuesday, Oct. 26 at noon. The annual pumpkin carving contest will follow the mini-concert.

On Thursday, two movies will be held. "Nosferatu, The Vampyre" will play at 1 p.m. This movie, starring Klaus Kinski and Isabelle Adjani, was written, produced and directed by Germany's Werner Herzog.

The second movie will be John Carpenter's "Halloween," playing at 7:30 p.m. Both movies will be in the Fireside Lounge, and will be free to students of the College.

Friday, the ASG will host their annual Halloween Dance, which will be a costumed affair. The group performing will be "Snake Eyes."

Art show in Pauling

By Kari Gassaway

The works of four Clackamas County artists are being shown in the Pauling Science Center through Oct. 27.

"There is no specific theme, but we chose the work of artists who blended together," Kathi Emmert, coordinator of the Clackamas County Art Council, said. There are four artists on exhibit: Marion Hilton, still life photographs; Vicki Chandler, wildlife photographs; Vincent Pelumbo, jewelry; and Dulcie Lindso, sculpture.

"The Art Council show was advertised in the council newsletter and in various Clackamas County newspapers," Emmert said.

Board members discuss policy ; examine survey of graduates

By Shelley Ball

A survey of Clackamas Community College graduates, enrollment and a proposed policy regarding alcohol on campus were some of the topics discussed at the College's Board of Education Meeting Oct. 13.

The alcohol policy is still in the process of being formed and will be finished for the November Board meeting.

In regards to enrollment, a report presented by Dean of Student Services Jim Roberts showed fall term enrollment up five percent, with the head count down nearly 10 percent from last year. This means that fewer people are enrolling but are taking more classes. The head count is expected to rise when Community Education classes are counted.

Higher tuition at state schools, the state of the economy and a higher acceptance of community college programs were reasons given for the rise in enrollment.

According to a survey reported by Coordinator of Staff Development Dr. Kent Heaton, the College's 1982 graduates are reported to have positive feelings towards the school, especially after being away for a year, and employers rate the College's 1981 graduates as being well-prepared for the working world, giving high marks in attitude preparation and technical training.

In addition the Board passed an authorization for the Clackamas County Treasurer to invest District money for the year 1982-83 under the discretion of the College and approved the donation of one full year (three quarters) tuition waiver to the Red Soils Youth Complex auction scheduled for Oct. 30, 7 p.m. at the Carpenter's Hall in Oregon City to support efforts to provide educational, recreational and athletic facilities for Clackamas County youths.

Auction items included two approved fund transfers from Materials and Services in the General Fund to Capital Outlay in the General Fund. The first transferred $6,000 to support payment of beef livestock unable to be obtained on a consignment basis. The second shifted $6,600 to help purchase a word processing station for instruction.

A fund transfer of $1,250 from Materials and Services in the General Fund to Personnel Services in the General Fund to support more personnel services for staff development salaries was also passed.
