

Harlow's team 'phenomenal'

"Attention, all impromptu and extempers qualified for finals, report to your rounds. Postings for all I.E.'s including expos, interp, and oratory are on the boards." If you understand any of these terms, it is probable that you have been in or around a speech team at one time or another.

Forensics, the art of giving speeches, is a mystery to many people. Why would anyone want to give a speech, and of their own free will? Not only do the people on Clackamas Community College's speech team deliver speeches, they also enjoy doing it. Their enthusiasm can be seen in the fact that many of the 14 members of the team have invented, written and memorized at least two, eight-minute speeches. In some cases, each speaker knows two or three more from more from memory, and can do them all at the same tournament.

Last term the speech team led by head coach Frank Harlow and assistant coach Connie Conners went to meets as far as 180 miles away. During the course of the Fall term, the team came home with 12 to 15 trophies and awards. Four of the speakers, Teresa Svatos, Bob Bayles, Linda Perkins, and Scott VanCleave, qualified for the National Championships, April 6-12 in San Antonio, Texas.

While the people speaking in individual events, (I.E.'s), in Frank Harlow's own words are "doing superior," the debate team could be classed as phenomenal, being ranked third in the nation.

The speech team offers the opportunity to give many different kinds of speeches. Interpretation and persuasive speeches are done by most members, followed by expository, debate, extemporaneous and impromptu.

"Most people hear about the program in the Speech 111 class, and then get involved," Harlow said. All of the people on the team were amateurs at one time or another. But with practice, they have improved. These practices take place on Mondays and Wednesdays from 1-4 p.m., in Harlow's office. Being part of the speech team fulfills part of the Art and Letters requirement with one-three credits toward a General Education major.

Even though the team is doing a good job this year, they need more people. Most schools have at least 25 people on their teams so that not all the speakers have to go to every tournament. So if you can speak English, go for it.

A series of free workshops beginning Jan. 26 at Clackamas Community College will help displaced workers learn "ways to prepare for job search," Director of Counseling Art Hames said.

The workshops are part of a new Displaced Worker Program at the College, which Hames helped to form. He explained that the idea for the program came after he and other College staff members attended a Displaced Worker Workshop at Linn-Benton Community College on Oct. 29.

The increased number of displaced workers also prompted the formation of the Displaced Worker Program. Hames said there are currently 160,000 unemployed people in Oregon, with 25,000 in Clackamas county alone.

"The displaced worker is one who is not going to return to his original job, usually because the job has been eliminated through mechanization," Hames said. "We're not planning to find jobs for people, but what kinds of things they can do to best employ their time."

In correlation with the new program are ongoing workshops in the Career Center, which is directed by Career Development & Placement Officer Marv Thornley. Thornley was also involved in organizing the Displaced Worker Program.

"People have to be involved in planning, but we're not trying to be experts and solve everybody's problems," he said.

"There is no quick fix or simple solution," Hames said. "When the people are ready to realize they need help, we're here for them."

The four workshops make up C.H.O.I.C.E. (Career Hunt Options In Current Economy) and will be held in the Community Center from 2-4 p.m. in room 117 starting Jan. 26. Titles and dates for the workshops are: Coping In Today's Economy (Jan. 26, Feb. 23); Career And Skill Assessment (Feb. 2, March 2); Who Will Hire Me (Feb. 9, March 9); and How Do I Get Hired (Feb. 16, March 16).

"If it works well, we'll increase the number and size of workshops spring term," Hames said.

News Flash

Alcohol group opens doors

Families and friends of alcoholics are invited to AL-ANON meetings to be held every Tuesday, at Good Samaritan Hospital and Medical Center. Meetings will take place from 3:30-5 p.m. in conference rooms B-1 and B-2 on the third floor of the main hospital.

These group meetings offer education and support, as you learn about alcoholism as an illness, and meet with others who share your problems.

Locals back armory plan

A survey recently released by Clackamas Community College indicates that district residents are in favor of locating a proposed National Guard Armory on campus.

Results of the survey were discussed at the College board meeting Jan. 12. Any decision on the Armory has been tabled pending further study by the board.

Compiled by the College Research Office, the survey was a random sample of district resident. Of the 180 respondents, 40 percent were "very favorable;" 29 percent "somewhat favorable;" 20 percent were "undecided" or "don't care;" 6 percent answered "somewhat unfavorable" and 5 percent were "very unfavorable."

Reasons given for those supporting the move included the multiple use of a public building, easy access and benefit to both the College and the community. Those opposed cited separation of government and education, traffic problems, and future college use of the space.

The Armory would be constructed on five acres of deeded College land. For more information, contact the Public Information Office at 657-8400, ext. 440.

Women focus on concerns

An informal support group for women is being offered Thursday afternoons at Clackamas Community College. Community members are welcome to participate in the free sessions, which will focus on such topics as isolation, depression, intimacy, relaxation and self-esteem.

The group meets from 2:30 - 4 p.m. in the CCC Community Center room 115. For more information, contact the Women's Resource Center at 657-8400, ext. 306.

Winter risk hits seniors

Some simple prevention and education can help prevent a winter killer, Hypothermia. This risk for campers, skiers and other nature lovers, can also strike those at home during the icy winter months.

A workshop designed to aid the elderly and others in prevention of this health hazard is being offered at Clackamas Community College Jan. 25, from 9 a.m. - noon. Home weatherization tips and recognition of symptoms will be discussed in the workshop, to be held in CCC's Community Center 101. There is a $3 fee, or no charge for Gold Card holders.

For more information, contact the Aging Education department at 657-8400, ext. 417.

GET AN EDUCATION MONEY CAN'T BUY. PLUS $15,200 FOR COLLEGE.

Join the Army for two years. Because not only is the Army one place where you'll mature in a hurry, it's a great place to get a lot of money for college fast, too.

You see, if you participate in the Army's college financial assistance program, the money you save for college is matched two-for-one by the government. Then, if you qualify, the Army will add up to $8,000 on top of that.

That's $15,200 in just two years. For more information call your college recruiter.
