

EVENTS CALENDAR

Wednesday, May 25 Long Range Planning Committee 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Small Dining Room	Thursday, May 26 Focus Seminar: Fitness for Women Over 40 7-10 p.m. CC 101	Friday, May 27 Open Recreation 6-9 p.m. Weight Room	Monday, May 30 College Closed	Wednesday, June 1 Jazz Festival 8-11 p.m. West Linn High School
--	---	--	--	--

the print

Clackamas Community College

Wednesday May 25, 1983

Vol. XVI, No. 26

Engstrom named to head College Foundation office

By Shelley Ball
Of The Print

There's a new face in the office of Clackamas Community College's Development Center, Trailer A, as of May 16.

Dick Engstrom is the College's new development officer and executive director of the Foundation. He replaces former Officer/Director Bill Anton.

As development officer, Engstrom said his job consists of "seeking out alternative resources" for funding the College. The purpose of the College's Foundation is to "provide a mechanism for the community so donors can give in a variety of ways, and supplement activities of the College," he said.

Engstrom, 43, has attended Clark and Vancouver Colleges, and has a bachelor of science degree from Portland State University and a masters in social work from Boston College. He applied for the job of officer/director because the College "has a good reputation," and is well-supported by the community.

Engstrom also stressed that the development center is not "a magical office that does it all," but "only appears as part of the total college community. We're an assistance to them," he said.

"Being involved in something that was going to develop," was another reason why Engstrom applied for the position. Having previously been involved for 10 years in county government (he served on the Environmental Services Department of Multnomah County), Engstrom said he spent the final five years cutting programs, a task of which he was tired.

"Carrying out the priorities of the College . . . and seeing if we can't find ways to support activities the College thinks are important." Foundation director Dick Engstrom said of his new job.

Now that he is employed at the College, Engstrom said his new job will be a "flip-flop" from the activities of his earlier job.

"Carrying out the priorities of the College," and "seeing if we (development center) can't find other ways to support activities the College thinks are important," are Engstrom's goals for his new job. He also describes himself as having an ongoing commitment to higher education.

"I need to find out where I should be spending my time," Engstrom said, as he has only been employed for just over a week.

Error found in article

In last week's issue of The Print, a front page story ran on summer financial aid availability for veterans.

Scott Fischer, financial aid officer, pointed out an error in the headline. The story dealt with veterans' benefits that go toward summer tuition. That, however, is not actually financial aid, but an entitlement, Fischer said.

Financial Aid office received calls from non-veterans, wondering why they were turned down for aid and the vets are not.

The Print regrets any misunderstanding stemming from the article and the headline. For further information on summer school and financial aid for fall term, contact the aid department, ext. 422.

After the story ran, the

Dick Engstrom

This week's surprisingly beautiful weather forced normally rain-soaked Oregonians out into the sun, including LeRoy Anderson's jazz band class.

Photo by Duane Hiersche

