

Stradley dons policeman's uniform for College

PUBLIC SAFETY'S FINEST—New Public Safety Officer Mike Stradley stands beside College patrol car. Stradley became a campus officer in October.

By Heather Wright
Of The Print

"I do not consider myself a stereotype law enforcement officer. I am here for a reason. I am a public servant," Mike Stradley, Public Safety's new officer, said.

Stradley began working with Clackamas Community College's Public Safety Office on Oct. 26. Being a new officer, Stradley works varied shifts equaling a 32 hour week.

Stradley started his profession in Idaho as a security officer at a gold mine corporation. He worked there for one year before moving back to Oregon, where he worked at Beaverton Mall for security. After working there for a year, Stradley became a reserve officer at the Oregon City Police Department. He was sworn in as a reserve January 4, 1983. Stradley, 23, was born in California, his family moved to Oregon and lived in Portland for most of his life. He is married and has one son.

"I am in this job to help people . . . what I mean is, I give out directions, help people who are injured or have property stolen," Stradley said.

All public safety officers are also reserve officers at Oregon City Police Department. "Reserve Officers must be 21 years of age, have a clean police record and must be a United States citizen," Officer Gordon Huiras of Oregon City Police Department said.

Public safety officers are employees of the College. They must attend monthly reserve meetings at Oregon City Police Department, held on the second Wednesday of every month, and qualify with their guns on the gun range four times a year.

Besides working at the college, public safety officers must ride 16 hours in a 30-day period with the Oregon City Police Department.

"I like working with Public Safety because it provides a good basic experience for future employment in law enforcement," Stradley said.

Stradley is looking forward for winter term classes to start.

"Officer Stradley was highly recommended by the Oregon City reserves. Out of 70 applicants, Stradley was voted unanimously by the Public Safety's selection board," Chief of Public Safety Stan Johnson said.

Agriculture theme for campus animal center

By Kathy Johnson
Of The Print

In March of 1982, the Animal Science Center became available for use by Clackamas Community College.

The purpose of the Center, which is located on the east side of the campus near Beaver Creek Road, is to allow students who are involved in the Agri-business curriculum a hands-on approach to developing skills in the handling and maintaining of livestock.

"It makes for a more efficient method of allowing students to gain practical knowledge, not only of livestock, but of the livestock facilities, crops and other such things," stated Mr. David J. Myers, Agriculture Department Head.

Before the opening of the Winter term registration commences Dec. 12

A few remaining appointment cards for winter term registration are available for students who have not picked one up yet at the admissions window in the Community Center.

Registration will begin Dec. 12 and will last through Dec. 15. Registration for returning students has been scheduled for Dec. 12 and 13, Dec. 14 for new and returning students, and Dec. 15 for open registration, where no appointment cards are necessary.

Hours for registration are from 8:30 a.m. to noon, 1 to 4:30 p.m. and 5:30 to 8 p.m. A Saturday registration day has been set for Jan. 7 from 8 a.m.

Wednesday, November 30, 1983

Animal Science Center, students involved in livestock courses had to attend demonstrations at local farms or high schools.

"This is still being done to a certain extent to involve students with the farm community," Myers stated. "However, the drawback to this was that many times the class was large enough for the farmer to feel a certain amount of disruption by having the class participate on a regular basis."

The livestock which are presently being considered for the facility are a breeding herd of hogs and a breeding flock of sheep, with the idea of feeding out the market hogs and lambs. Cattle is also being brought in at the feeder size, approximately 550 to 750 pounds. They are then fed for 120 days, at which time they are at market size.

to 1 p.m.

Telephone registration will last from Dec. 19-22, and will accept Visa or Master Card only. Registration hours are from 2-4 p.m., and registration by mail should be post marked by Dec. 23. Both phone and mail registration are for students taking 7 or less credits.

Students with appointment cards are asked to put their name and social security number on them and will need to bring them to registration. It is also advised that students see a counselor between now and registration to get their schedules in order. Winter term begins Tuesday, Jan. 3.

Since the college lies within the Oregon City city limits, there were some specifications which needed to be met before building the livestock facility. These included construction requirements, counteraction of possible odors and color coat specifications of the building. Details had to meet the requirements of DEQ (Department of Environmental Quality) and the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency).

The facility is now emphasizing the business aspect of livestock as well as other agricultural aspects within the curriculum.

"We are trying to make it as close to a farm situation as possible," Myers said. "We are also putting more emphasis on the involvement of 4-H, FFA and the Oregon

Center, Tuesday Dec. 13 - Friday Dec. 16.

Donations may be taken to collection barrels which are placed throughout the campus, or to the Career Development/Placement Center.

"Some day we wish to make the canned food drive a year-round function. Charity begins at home," Cox said. "It's a worthy cause and I'm going to take the time out of my schedule to help."

Students interested in helping with the canned food drive, they can bring a can of food to the recreation center, in exchange for two free games

of pool.

Craig Danielson of Danielson's Thriftway is helping the canned food drive by donating boxes and sacks, and is willing to assist in any way possible.

The registered club that brings in the most canned goods will win its choice of $50 or a 3x5 advertisement in The Print. The clubs bringing in at least 200 pounds of canned goods will be treated to an ice cream feed.

For further information on the canned food drive, contact Kate Ellis at the Career Development/Placement Center, extension 213.

Faculty, administration and classified staff will recommend those students eligible for the canned food goods.

Cox mentioned that there will be no need for students to be ashamed or embarrassed. The students will not be identified in any way.

Students may pick up the canned goods in the Career Development/Placement Center in the Community

Center, Tuesday Dec. 13 - Friday Dec. 16.

Donations may be taken to collection barrels which are placed throughout the campus, or to the Career Development/Placement Center.

"Some day we wish to make the canned food drive a year-round function. Charity begins at home," Cox said. "It's a worthy cause and I'm going to take the time out of my schedule to help."

Students interested in helping with the canned food drive, they can bring a can of food to the recreation center, in exchange for two free games

of pool.

Craig Danielson of Danielson's Thriftway is helping the canned food drive by donating boxes and sacks, and is willing to assist in any way possible.

The registered club that brings in the most canned goods will win its choice of $50 or a 3x5 advertisement in The Print. The clubs bringing in at least 200 pounds of canned goods will be treated to an ice cream feed.

For further information on the canned food drive, contact Kate Ellis at the Career Development/Placement Center, extension 213.

Faculty, administration and classified staff will recommend those students eligible for the canned food goods.

Cox mentioned that there will be no need for students to be ashamed or embarrassed. The students will not be identified in any way.

Students may pick up the canned goods in the Career Development/Placement Center in the Community

Center, Tuesday Dec. 13 - Friday Dec. 16.

Donations may be taken to collection barrels which are placed throughout the campus, or to the Career Development/Placement Center.

"Some day we wish to make the canned food drive a year-round function. Charity begins at home," Cox said. "It's a worthy cause and I'm going to take the time out of my schedule to help."

Students interested in helping with the canned food drive, they can bring a can of food to the recreation center, in exchange for two free games

of pool.

Craig Danielson of Danielson's Thriftway is helping the canned food drive by donating boxes and sacks, and is willing to assist in any way possible.

The registered club that brings in the most canned goods will win its choice of $50 or a 3x5 advertisement in The Print. The clubs bringing in at least 200 pounds of canned goods will be treated to an ice cream feed.

For further information on the canned food drive, contact Kate Ellis at the Career Development/Placement Center, extension 213.

Faculty, administration and classified staff will recommend those students eligible for the canned food goods.

Cox mentioned that there will be no need for students to be ashamed or embarrassed. The students will not be identified in any way.

Students may pick up the canned goods in the Career Development/Placement Center in the Community

Center, Tuesday Dec. 13 - Friday Dec. 16.

Donations may be taken to collection barrels which are placed throughout the campus, or to the Career Development/Placement Center.

"Some day we wish to make the canned food drive a year-round function. Charity begins at home," Cox said. "It's a worthy cause and I'm going to take the time out of my schedule to help."

Students interested in helping with the canned food drive, they can bring a can of food to the recreation center, in exchange for two free games

of pool.

Craig Danielson of Danielson's Thriftway is helping the canned food drive by donating boxes and sacks, and is willing to assist in any way possible.

The registered club that brings in the most canned goods will win its choice of $50 or a 3x5 advertisement in The Print. The clubs bringing in at least 200 pounds of canned goods will be treated to an ice cream feed.

For further information on the canned food drive, contact Kate Ellis at the Career Development/Placement Center, extension 213.

Faculty, administration and classified staff will recommend those students eligible for the canned food goods.

Cox mentioned that there will be no need for students to be ashamed or embarrassed. The students will not be identified in any way.

Students may pick up the canned goods in the Career Development/Placement Center in the Community

Center, Tuesday Dec. 13 - Friday Dec. 16.

Donations may be taken to collection barrels which are placed throughout the campus, or to the Career Development/Placement Center.

"Some day we wish to make the canned food drive a year-round function. Charity begins at home," Cox said. "It's a worthy cause and I'm going to take the time out of my schedule to help."

Students interested in helping with the canned food drive, they can bring a can of food to the recreation center, in exchange for two free games

of pool.

Craig Danielson of Danielson's Thriftway is helping the canned food drive by donating boxes and sacks, and is willing to assist in any way possible.

The registered club that brings in the most canned goods will win its choice of $50 or a 3x5 advertisement in The Print. The clubs bringing in at least 200 pounds of canned goods will be treated to an ice cream feed.

For further information on the canned food drive, contact Kate Ellis at the Career Development/Placement Center, extension 213.

Faculty, administration and classified staff will recommend those students eligible for the canned food goods.

Cox mentioned that there will be no need for students to be ashamed or embarrassed. The students will not be identified in any way.

Students may pick up the canned goods in the Career Development/Placement Center in the Community

Center, Tuesday Dec. 13 - Friday Dec. 16.

Donations may be taken to collection barrels which are placed throughout the campus, or to the Career Development/Placement Center.

"Some day we wish to make the canned food drive a year-round function. Charity begins at home," Cox said. "It's a worthy cause and I'm going to take the time out of my schedule to help."

Students interested in helping with the canned food drive, they can bring a can of food to the recreation center, in exchange for two free games

of pool.

Craig Danielson of Danielson's Thriftway is helping the canned food drive by donating boxes and sacks, and is willing to assist in any way possible.

The registered club that brings in the most canned goods will win its choice of $50 or a 3x5 advertisement in The Print. The clubs bringing in at least 200 pounds of canned goods will be treated to an ice cream feed.

For further information on the canned food drive, contact Kate Ellis at the Career Development/Placement Center, extension 213.

Faculty, administration and classified staff will recommend those students eligible for the canned food goods.

Cox mentioned that there will be no need for students to be ashamed or embarrassed. The students will not be identified in any way.

Students may pick up the canned goods in the Career Development/Placement Center in the Community

Center, Tuesday Dec. 13 - Friday Dec. 16.

Donations may be taken to collection barrels which are placed throughout the campus, or to the Career Development/Placement Center.

"Some day we wish to make the canned food drive a year-round function. Charity begins at home," Cox said. "It's a worthy cause and I'm going to take the time out of my schedule to help."

Students interested in helping with the canned food drive, they can bring a can of food to the recreation center, in exchange for two free games

of pool.

Craig Danielson of Danielson's Thriftway is helping the canned food drive by donating boxes and sacks, and is willing to assist in any way possible.

The registered club that brings in the most canned goods will win its choice of $50 or a 3x5 advertisement in The Print. The clubs bringing in at least 200 pounds of canned goods will be treated to an ice cream feed.

For further information on the canned food drive, contact Kate Ellis at the Career Development/Placement Center, extension 213.

Faculty, administration and classified staff will recommend those students eligible for the canned food goods.

Cox mentioned that there will be no need for students to be ashamed or embarrassed. The students will not be identified in any way.

Students may pick up the canned goods in the Career Development/Placement Center in the Community

Center, Tuesday Dec. 13 - Friday Dec. 16.

Donations may be taken to collection barrels which are placed throughout the campus, or to the Career Development/Placement Center.

"Some day we wish to make the canned food drive a year-round function. Charity begins at home," Cox said. "It's a worthy cause and I'm going to take the time out of my schedule to help."

Students interested in helping with the canned food drive, they can bring a can of food to the recreation center, in exchange for two free games

of pool.

Craig Danielson of Danielson's Thriftway is helping the canned food drive by donating boxes and sacks, and is willing to assist in any way possible.

The registered club that brings in the most canned goods will win its choice of $50 or a 3x5 advertisement in The Print. The clubs bringing in at least 200 pounds of canned goods will be treated to an ice cream feed.

For further information on the canned food drive, contact Kate Ellis at the Career Development/Placement Center, extension 213.

Faculty, administration and classified staff will recommend those students eligible for the canned food goods.

Cox mentioned that there will be no need for students to be ashamed or embarrassed. The students will not be identified in any way.

Students may pick up the canned goods in the Career Development/Placement Center in the Community

Center, Tuesday Dec. 13 - Friday Dec. 16.

Donations may be taken to collection barrels which are placed throughout the campus, or to the Career Development/Placement Center.

"Some day we wish to make the canned food drive a year-round function. Charity begins at home," Cox said. "It's a worthy cause and I'm going to take the time out of my schedule to help."

Students interested in helping with the canned food drive, they can bring a can of food to the recreation center, in exchange for two free games

of pool.

Craig Danielson of Danielson's Thriftway is helping the canned food drive by donating boxes and sacks, and is willing to assist in any way possible.

The registered club that brings in the most canned goods will win its choice of $50 or a 3x5 advertisement in The Print. The clubs bringing in at least 200 pounds of canned goods will be treated to an ice cream feed.

For further information on the canned food drive, contact Kate Ellis at the Career Development/Placement Center, extension 213.

Faculty, administration and classified staff will recommend those students eligible for the canned food goods.

Cox mentioned that there will be no need for students to be ashamed or embarrassed. The students will not be identified in any way.

Students may pick up the canned goods in the Career Development/Placement Center in the Community

Center, Tuesday Dec. 13 - Friday Dec. 16.

Donations may be taken to collection barrels which are placed throughout the campus, or to the Career Development/Placement Center.

"Some day we wish to make the canned food drive a year-round function. Charity begins at home," Cox said. "It's a worthy cause and I'm going to take the time out of my schedule to help."

Students interested in helping with the canned food drive, they can bring a can of food to the recreation center, in exchange for two free games

of pool.

Craig Danielson of Danielson's Thriftway is helping the canned food drive by donating boxes and sacks, and is willing to assist in any way possible.

The registered club that brings in the most canned goods will win its choice of $50 or a 3x5 advertisement in The Print. The clubs bringing in at least 200 pounds of canned goods will be treated to an ice cream feed.

For further information on the canned food drive, contact Kate Ellis at the Career Development/Placement Center, extension 213.

Faculty, administration and classified staff will recommend those students eligible for the canned food goods.

Cox mentioned that there will be no need for students to be ashamed or embarrassed. The students will not be identified in any way.

Students may pick up the canned goods in the Career Development/Placement Center in the Community

Center, Tuesday Dec. 13 - Friday Dec. 16.

Donations may be taken to collection barrels which are placed throughout the campus, or to the Career Development/Placement Center.

"Some day we wish to make the canned food drive a year-round function. Charity begins at home," Cox said. "It's a worthy cause and I'm going to take the time out of my schedule to help."

Students interested in helping with the canned food drive, they can bring a can of food to the recreation center, in exchange for two free games

of pool.

Craig Danielson of Danielson's Thriftway is helping the canned food drive by donating boxes and sacks, and is willing to assist in any way possible.

The registered club that brings in the most canned goods will win its choice of $50 or a 3x5 advertisement in The Print. The clubs bringing in at least 200 pounds of canned goods will be treated to an ice cream feed.

For further information on the canned food drive, contact Kate Ellis at the Career Development/Placement Center, extension 213.

Faculty, administration and classified staff will recommend those students eligible for the canned food goods.

Cox mentioned that there will be no need for students to be ashamed or embarrassed. The students will not be identified in any way.

Students may pick up the canned goods in the Career Development/Placement Center in the Community

Center, Tuesday Dec. 13 - Friday Dec. 16.

Donations may be taken to collection barrels which are placed throughout the campus, or to the Career Development/Placement Center.

"Some day we wish to make the canned food drive a year-round function. Charity begins at home," Cox said. "It's a worthy cause and I'm going to take the time out of my schedule to help."

Students interested in helping with the canned food drive, they can bring a can of food to the recreation center, in exchange for two free games

of pool.

Craig Danielson of Danielson's Thriftway is helping the canned food drive by donating boxes and sacks, and is willing to assist in any way possible.

The registered club that brings in the most canned goods will win its choice of $50 or a 3x5 advertisement in The Print. The clubs bringing in at least 200 pounds of canned goods will be treated to an ice cream feed.

For further information on the canned food drive, contact Kate Ellis at the Career Development/Placement Center, extension 213.

Faculty, administration and classified staff will recommend those students eligible for the canned food goods.

Cox mentioned that there will be no need for students to be ashamed or embarrassed. The students will not be identified in any way.

Students may pick up the canned goods in the Career Development/Placement Center in the Community

Center, Tuesday Dec. 13 - Friday Dec. 16.

Donations may be taken to collection barrels which are placed throughout the campus, or to the Career Development/Placement Center.

"Some day we wish to make the canned food drive a year-round function. Charity begins at home," Cox said. "It's a worthy cause and I'm going to take the time out of my schedule to help."

Students interested in helping with the canned food drive, they can bring a can of food to the recreation center, in exchange for two free games

of pool.

Craig Danielson of Danielson's Thriftway is helping the canned food drive by donating boxes and sacks, and is willing to assist in any way possible.

The registered club that brings in the most canned goods will win its choice of $50 or a 3x5 advertisement in The Print. The clubs bringing in at least 200 pounds of canned goods will be treated to an ice cream feed.

For further information on the canned food drive, contact Kate Ellis at the Career Development/Placement Center, extension 213.

Faculty, administration and classified staff will recommend those students eligible for the canned food goods.

Cox mentioned that there will be no need for students to be ashamed or embarrassed. The students will not be identified in any way.

Students may pick up the canned goods in the Career Development/Placement Center in the Community

Center, Tuesday Dec. 13 - Friday Dec. 16.

Donations may be taken to collection barrels which are placed throughout the campus, or to the Career Development/Placement Center.

"Some day we wish to make the canned food drive a year-round function. Charity begins at home," Cox said. "It's a worthy cause and I'm going to take the time out of my schedule to help."

Students interested in helping with the canned food drive, they can bring a can of food to the recreation center, in exchange for two free games

of pool.

Craig Danielson of Danielson's Thriftway is helping the canned food drive by donating boxes and sacks, and is willing to assist in any way possible.

The registered club that brings in the most canned goods will win its choice of $50 or a 3x5 advertisement in The Print. The clubs bringing in at least 200 pounds of canned goods will be treated to an ice cream feed.

For further information on the canned food drive, contact Kate Ellis at the Career Development/Placement Center, extension 213.

Faculty, administration and classified staff will recommend those students eligible for the canned food goods.