

The Arts

Logo contest deadline due

"Battlefield Earth" logo design contest is currently underway and open to anyone who wants to try their creative flair in coming up with a logo for two "Battlefield Earth" films based on the novel by L. Ron Hubbard.

The winner of the contest will receive a $1,000 cash award and "potential screen credit." Executive Producer William Immerman stated in the publicity package that he is looking for an identifying logo or graphic design that will, "vividly, thematically capture the epic scale, the dramatic magnitude of the two, $50 million Battlefield Earth films."

The deadline for the contest was moved back from a previous date to allow more entries from artists at colleges who may be busy with the beginning of the fall term. The movie is based on Hubbard's story of "intergalactic war and adventure, Earth versus giant alien Psychlos a thousand years in the future," stated Immerman.

Second and third prizes of $750 and $500 respectively, along with twenty runner-up prizes will also be awarded to contestants.

The judges who will award the prizes consist of the film's Producer William Immerman, ("Southern Comfort" and "Take This Job and Shove It"), Director Ken Annakin, ("The Longest Day"), and Screenwriter Abraham Polonsky, ("Monsignor" and "Mommy Dearest").

Contest rules and entry forms can be found in the college art Department or by writing to "Battlefield Earth Movie Logo Contest," 2210 Wilshire Boulevard, Suite 453, Santa Monica, California 90403. Mailed requests must include a self-addressed, stamped envelope and be postmarked no later than midnight, November 15.

A 30-foot high inflatable version of Terl, the Psycho villain of two upcoming Hollywood movie spectacles based on L. Ron Hubbard's smash bestseller, "Battlefield Earth," impatiently confronts the judges of a nationwide amateur artists' contest to find a "logo" design for the two $50 million films. Agreeing to extend the deadline for contest entries until Nov. 15 are "Battlefield Earth" film director Ken Annakin and Salem Productions executive producer William Immerman.

Tribute to music set

Collaborating for a musical tribute to the music of America, "It's Origin, Composers and Patriotism," are four musical groups from Clackamas Community College's Music Department.

The concert is a "Salute to American Music," said Lonnie Cline, who along with Instrumental instructor Gary Nelson, will direct the concert. The four performing groups will include The Brass Ensemble, The Community Choir, The Chamber Choir and The College Chorale. Each group will perform separate pieces as well as combining their talents for a finale featuring "Sea to Shining Sea."

The concert will be held in the College's McLoughlin Theater at 7:30 p.m., Nov. 9. The admission is $1 for students and $2 for adults. Children under twelve and Gold Card holders are admitted free.

College's crafts fair expands

By J. Jason
Of the Print

The 1984 annual Crafts Fair, sponsored by the Associated Student Government of Clackamas Community College is coming right up Dec. 4 - 5, and it promises to be bigger and better than ever before, Student Program Specialist David Buckley said.

"This is the first year that the fair is lasting two days," said Buckley. The expanded schedule will give both buyers and sellers more of a chance to make the event a success. The fair will be open at 10 a.m. and close at 5 p.m. both days.

The fair has always drawn a lot of interest, as the fair committee has received hundreds of applications for table space. "There is no fee for students to have a table, however each person must go through a selection process. The reason for the process is so we can make sure that the high quality items are presented, and so we don't have repetition," Buckley said.

The last day to submit an application for table space at the fair is Nov. 9. There is a $15 fee for community residents who want to display their goods.

Items expected to be on display include stained glass, crochet projects and wooden toys. Buckley said he expects a lot of Christmas holiday items will be offered.

The Print

Wants Your Advertising Message

For more information call 657-8400, ext. 309, 310 or stop by Trailer B.

Clackamas Community College

