The Clackamas Community College volleyball team finished regular season play in second place. The Cougar netters will now advance to the regional playoff, which will include eleven other northwest teams, and will be played at Mt. Hood Community College on Nov. 29, 30, and Dec. 1.

The deciding factor which placed Clackamas second in league was their match against South Western Oregon Community College (SWOCC) at Coos Bay, last Saturday. It took the Cougars the full five games to defeat the SWOCC team in what coach Kathie Woods described as "a hard fought game." The win boosted the team's record to six wins, four losses in league action. The Cougars' win Saturday lifted them into a tie with Lane Community College, but since Clackamas had beaten the Lane team twice during the season, they conceded to Clackamas. Lane

Community College will now go on to play SWOCC for the third place ranking.

In the game against SWOCC, Cougar netter Carrie Moore had 19 kills and was 60 for 65 in hitting. Bev Loverin had 14 kills and 4 stuff blocks. Jenny Holzemer added to the team effort with 30 assists and was 21 for 21 in serving with four service aces.

The team had a total of 56 kills in the match, "which is fairly high," Coach Woods said. The Cougars were also 98 percent in serving, getting 114 out of 116 serves over the net. The team had 50 assists and was 82 percent in attacking during the match. Service receiving was 72 percent and has "gone up dramatically since the beginning of the season," Woods said.

The scores of the five games in the match were 15-3, 4-15, 15-12, 8-15 and 15-12. The Cougar volleyball team is looking forward to doing well at the upcoming regional matches.

Turkey trotters run for prizes

At 12 noon last Tuesday, Nov. 20, participants took their places on the starting line for the beginning of the Intramural Turkey Trot.

The turkey trot was a 3.1 mile run on the Clackamas Community College campus. Ten runners participated in the event, which was sponsored by the Intramural Department.

Winners of each of the four categories received turkeys for the upcoming Thanksgiving holiday. Other runners in the turkey trot received a pie.

Winning the men's division was Dave Buckley with a time of 19:19. The women's division was won by Mary Grout in a time of 24:25.

Before the race started, participants took a guess at what their time would be on the course. The closest prediction for the men was made by Alan Borick, whose guess was only 13 seconds from his actual time in the race. Gladys Michael was only six seconds off her predicted time to win a turkey in the women's division.
