Clackamas Community College women's basketball team continues to dominate the courts with wins against Western Oregon State College and Chemeketa Community College this past week.

The Cougars are now ranked fifth in the Northwest Athletic Association of Community Colleges (NWAACC) while they hold a second place standing behind Linn-Benton Community College in the league.

On Wednesday the Cougars hosted the Wolves from Western Oregon State College. The Cougars clearly dominated the entire game, although late in the second half they seemed to falter under a full-court press by the Wolves' defense.

In the last few minutes of the game the Cougars created several turnovers caused by unsuccessful fastbreak attempts, but they won by a score of 76 to 67. Joanne Ineman was the high scorer for Clackamas with 30 points before fouling out late in the second half.

On Saturday, Clackamas hosted Chemeketa Community College whom they had already beaten earlier this season. Head Coach Phil Garver was especially impressed with the Cougar's performance, as he said "they are playing really good as a team."

Garver added that the freshmen have been doing a good job off the bench. He also stressed that the Cougars have been playing a more controlled game of basketball, with improved teamwork during the game. The Cougars got their fastbreak working well again, and had very few turnovers.

Joanne Ineman was once again the leading scorer with 26 points against Chemeketa, and also helped out with nine assists. Sue Canoy had a good game with 18 points, while Jean Doherty led the team in rebounding with nine.

The Cougars' next game is Jan. 30, when they travel to Gresham for a game with Mt. Hood Community College.

Wrestlers trounce SWOCC team

Suffering only one individual loss, the Clackamas Community College wrestling team walked away with an easy win in a dual meet against Southwestern Oregon Community College (SWOCC) Jan. 24.

Cougar wrestlers Eddie Killian, John Wachsmuth, and Tom Mannen had an especially easy day against SWOCC, winning by forfeit in their weight classes.

Cougar Jim Bispham lost a tough match in the 142-pound weight class against his SWOCC opponent. At 190 pounds, Cal McKinnis was the only Cougar wrestler to win by pinning his opponent.

The Cougar wrestlers won the remaining five weight classes by point decisions. Final score of the match was Clackamas 45, SWOCC 3.

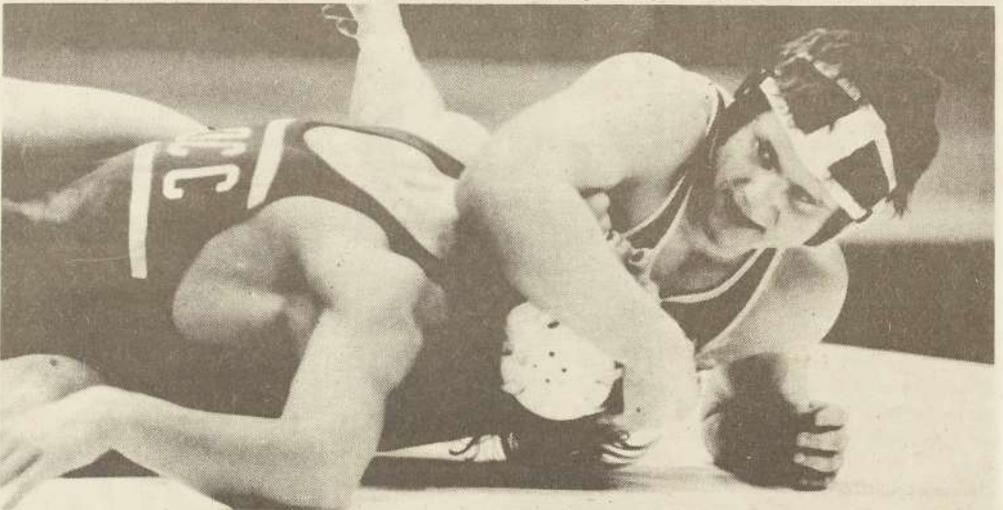

The Cougars also participated in the Oregon Wrestling Classic at Portland State University on Friday. Teams from colleges in Oregon, Washington, California and Idaho, 14 in all, competed at the tournament.

The Cougars went into the tournament knowing they would be up against the toughest competition all year. The Cougars, however, did well, placing eighth in the field of mostly four-year colleges.

"Tom Mannen did an outstanding job," Head Coach Norm Berney said of the Cougar wrestler, who placed third in his division of the competition. Also placing well for the Clackamas team was John Wachsmuth with a fourth place finish in the competition. Coach Berney also expressed great admiration for Jim Bispham, who made it to the semi-finals before sustaining a neck injury.
