

Speaker talks to volunteers Katz to address banquet

By Shelley Ball

As a way of saying thank you to those people who have helped out Clackamas Community College in one way or another, the College will be holding a volunteer banquet April 9.

"It provides an opportunity for us to say thanks," Dick Engstrom, College development officer said of the banquet, which will be held in the Community Center from 6:30-9 p.m.

The banquet is being co-sponsored by the College and the Foundation, a separate, non-profit entity made up of volunteers who help the College to develop friends and resources. Engstrom is the executive director of the Foundation, and he is involved in coordinating the dinner.

This will be the second year the College has held such a banquet. The first one was held in 1983. Engstrom explained a banquet wasn't held last year due to budgetary problems. "We're excited about doing it this year, and we would like to see it become an annual event," he added.

Speaker of the House Vera Katz, who also works as a development officer at Portland Community College, will be the guest speaker at the banquet, and door prizes and awards such as volunteer of the year will be given out. Engstrom said College departments are being asked to send in names of candidates for the awards and the banquet, the winners of which will be chosen by a committee made up of Foundation members.

Engstrom said College volunteers can range from those who have served on an advisory committee or as a Foundation board member, to helping out on a publication project for the Public Information Office (PIO) or just donating money. He added, however, "We're not just looking for people who have served on advisory committees, we're also looking for individuals who we may not (readily) look at as volunteers."

At least 200 individuals are expected to attend the banquet. Approximately 250 people attended the first banquet. Invitations are expected to be mailed out this week.

"I think it will be a nice event, one to be proud of," Engstrom said in regards to the banquet. Other College personnel involved in organizing the banquet include Debbie Baker, student activities director; Kevin McMurdo, director of community relations; Carol Patterson, custodial services manager; Beverly Fulmore, secretary to office of the president; Dr. Karen Lever, community services and women's programs coordinator; and Norm Grambusch, supervisor of food service.

Senators resign; Positions filled

By Amy LaBare

Following three senator resignations, Associated Student Government (ASG) has successfully conducted and completed a search for three new senators.

The three new senators that were chosen Tuesday, March 12 will be made known when they are officially sworn in at the Thursday, March 14 ASG meeting.

Rick Brown, former assistant to the president senator resigned because of a new job, Debbie Cayton, assistant to the president said. Brown was unavailable for comment.

Cayton also said Victor Price, former vice presidential senator resigned because of a job. Price was also unavailable for comment.

And Becky Riback, former administrative assistant senator resigned because she is moving to Alaska. Riback said she will be living with an aunt and uncle and will possibly be doing secretarial work for the state.

As part of the duties of ASG, senators are required to serve on planning committees for student activities and spend an allotted amount of time in the Student Activities Office each week.

Nine students applied for the three available positions. Allan Page, Vickee Ladsch and Steve Heintz applied for the assistant to the president senatorial position.

Students who applied for the administrative assistant senatorial position are Trish rdenas, Paul Sowards, Ginger Lecomte and Kevin Warren.

Coast adventure awaits students on spring break

Anyone who has no traveling plans set for spring break might be interested in exploring the sand dunes, forests, tide pools and mud flats of the Oregon Coast on a special trip provided by the John Inskeep Environmental Learning Center (ELC).

The trip, titled "Exploring the Oregon Coast" is designed to take an in-depth study of the Oregon Coast from the mud flats of Yaquina Bay to the heights of Cape Perpetua from March 29-31.

Participants will depart from the ELC at 1 p.m. March 29 by van. Activities include a dune buggy tour to study the sand dunes of Florence, numerous geologic and natural history stops and chances to study tide pools rich with sea life and aquatic plants. Oregon forest systems will also be studied.

Fees for the trip are $98 per person, $85 for ELC members. Participants need to pre-register by March 15. ELC Director Jerry Herrmann and ELC Biologist James Dalton will take the trip along with David Danley, Sunriver naturalist, and Dr. Ruth Keen, geologist.

For more informaton about the trip, contact the ELC at 657-8400, ext.351.

Bike race featured in Oregon City 'Rain Days'

Clackamas Community College students are invited to take part in the Oregon Rain Festival, which is being sponsored by the Greater Oregon City Development Company March 30-31.

Featured activities include a bicycle race, titled "a ride in the rain," which starts in Oregon city and goes to Mount Hood and back for a total of 80 miles. There is a $5 entry fee, and first prize is $250. The race begins at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, March 30.

Also included in this two-day extravaganza are an ugly umbrella contest with a $50 first-place award, a tour of old houses, wine tasting, duck races and a rain parade. There will also be a carnival that opens at 11 a.m. Saturday.

Series on health begins

Beginning with the first issue of spring term, The Print will be featuring a five-part series on health tips written by Pat Owen, who is a senior at Western States Chiropractic College in Portland.

Owen, who did his undergraduate work at Balwin-Wallace College in Berea, Ohio, said that his series will deal with common problems that a student may experience, such as lower back syndromes and migraine headaches.

Students who are interested may receive medical treatment from Owen at the chiropractic college for a rate reduced nearly 50 percent.

College advertises to increase enrollment

The Enrollment Management Plan that was recently developed to help increase full-time enrollment figures at Clackamas Community College is progressing right on schedule.

Assistant Dean of Student Services Lee Fawcett, who has been named as the plan's administrator, said the budget for the current year's activities has been approved and that advertising, which comprises the major portion of the special budget allotment is being done in a few different newspapers, including The

Print, and mailings to the vicinity.

The recent mailing delivered to homes in the area last week promoted the spring break short courses that are being offered at the College. Fawcett said the courses are being offered to the community to bring added interest to the College, and to bring the College closer to the state requirement for full-time enrollment levels. Even though the classes last only a week in most cases, they are in session for a satisfactory number of hours to qualify for full-time status.
