With the speech team placing high in various events, Clackamas finished second of the community colleges and third overall at the University of Oregon regional speech tournament held last weekend, October 18-19.

High scorers in the speech tournament were David Gloden, taking first in Novice Division Interpretation, and the team of Linda Kuntz and Marty Yost also taking first in Junior Division Dual Interpretation.

Also placing high were Jennifer Hanel capturing second in Junior Division Expository Speaking and Neil Hass receiving third in Novice Division Interpretation.

Finalists at the tournament included the debate team of Vince Vandercovering and Paula Barnes, Neil Hass and Heidi Mosier in Dual Interpretation, Vince Vandercovering in Novice Division Extemporaneous Speaking, and Veronica Hanel in Novice Division Expository Speaking.

Clackamas placed second behind Anchorage Community College. The University of Oregon placed first. There were a total of 25 colleges and universities present from around the Northwest. The team consisted of only ten students. Speech Coach Frank Harlow commented on the placing, saying that it wasn't bad, as Clackamas was competing against the Harvards of the West Coast.

Commenting on his placing, Gloden said it was "quite unexpected. This was my first tournament."

Jennifer Hanel responded,

"While I did get second place, I still believe I am not competing to my fullest potential."

"This being my first tournament, I was quite pleased with my performance; however, with preparation, I'm confident I could make first," said Veronica Hanel. Hass added, "It was an interesting experience. I appreciated the support from my fellow competitors."

Mosier commented, "I think our team is very strong this year," while Harlow noted, "We should be able to do a lot better. We've got the talent; they just need to work harder to win the whole thing." He added that the team is still not performing where they should be.

Lower Columbia Community College, in Kelso, Washington, will be the location of the Northwest Forensics Conference Tournament, titled the "Smelt Classic." The college will host 25-35 Northwest colleges and universities. Harlow hopes the team will work harder for this next "To better understand the sixties," answered Fred DeWolfe.
