Hudson leaving Clackamas

by Christopher Curran
Sports Editor

After 18 years as Clackamas Community College Athletic Director, Chuck Hudson is departing the college in the form of retirement.

Clackamas will have "an adequate and strong athletic program," according to Hudson.

Hudson also started and lead crusades to get better and stronger athletic facilities, including the gym in Randall Hall.

Fishing, hunting, and golf are some of the things that Hudson is looking forward to after his retirement, which becomes official at the end of the first term.

"He's been the glue that's helped keep the department together in good times and in bad," said Dale McGriff, who is succeeding Hudson. "He's also been a good spokesman for the (athletic) department."

"He's able to take an issue and see both sides of it," added McGriff.

Before coming to Clackamas, Hudson coached and taught history at Bend High School, as well as Milton-Freewater and Ione High Schools where he taught U.S. and World History along with coaching "everything."

McGriff, who has been at the college since 1971, was the assistant football coach at Portland State before coming to Clackamas and a coach at Nampa High School (Idaho) before that. McGriff graduated from Portland State.

"We need to keep the continuity going that he (Hudson) has started," said McGriff. "We need to keep the good relationships going."

"He (Hudson) was able to meet the needs of many people at once," added McGriff, "both through the staff and the community."

With Hudson, the second Athletic Director in the college's history, leaving, the athletes, coaches, and staff are losing more than just a staff member; the college is losing one of its best friends.

Who's up there?

The National Basketball Association is getting taller. Only two of the 23 teams do not have a player who is at least seven feet tall. There are 38 seven-footers and Dallas has more than any other team with four. Here is a list of them:

- 7-7: Manute Bol, Washington
- 7-5: Mark Eaton, Utah; Chuck Nevitt, Detroit
- 7-4: Ralph Sampson, Houston
- 7-3: Randy Breuer, Milwaukee
- 7-2: Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, L.A. Lakers; James Donaldson, Dallas; Artis Gilmore, San Antonio; Nick Vanos, Phoenix
- 7-1: William Bedford, Phoenix; Uwe Blab, Dallas; Sam Bowie, Portland; Joe Barry Carroll, Golden State; Bill Cartwright, New York; Greg Dreiling, Indiana; James Edwards, Phoenix; Petur Gudmundsson, L.A. Lakers; Jawann Oldham, New York; Tree Rollins, Atlanta
- 7-1/2: Paul Mokeski, Milwaukee; Robert Parrish, Boston
- 7-0: Benoit Benjamin, L.A. Clippers; Brad Daugherty, Cleveland; Chris Engler, Milwaukee; Patrick Ewing, New York; Dave Feitl, Houston; Stuart Gray, Indiana; Jon Koncak, Atlanta; Alton Lister, Seattle; Tim McCormick, Philadelphia; Akeem Olajuwon, Houston; Blair Rasmussen, Denver; Brad Sellers, Chicago; Mike Smrek, L.A. Lakers; Steve Stiponovich, Indiana; Roy Tarpley, Dallas; Bill Wennington, Dallas; Kevin Willis, Atlanta

Program suggested to inform students

by Petrece Kraft
Contributing Writer

A drug education program has been proposed at Clackamas Community College to educate student athletes about different types of drugs, what they do, and where students can go to receive help.

The program is designed to be an informational and educational service to the students. "It's not a pressure thing," stated Dale McGriff, Associate Athletic Director. "It's just to help students to make intelligent decisions."

The Athletic Department hopes to begin the meetings in January. This program will be an on going event with numerous follow up meetings. It is an opportunity for all the athletes presented with announcements and up coming events. But most importantly students will be able to talk and ask questions about the use of drugs with a professional counselor and physician who specializes in drug therapy.

The goal of the program "is not trying to find out who is doing what... it is to give the athletes a clear understanding about what they're facing," McGriff said. By providing the athletes with the correct information about drugs, it will in turn be easier for them to make intelligent decisions of what to do

Ski club offers day at Meadows

by Amy Boyce
Reporting 1 Class

Do you like to ski? Are you on a limited budget? Well, the Ski Club has a deal for you.

This Saturday the Ski Club is having an all day ski at Mt. Hood Meadows. Ski lifts are $14, lessons are $7.50, and rentals are $8.50. The deadline to sign up is noon on the Dec. 12. Transportation will be a van which holds a maximum of 12 people. The cost is $4 which should be paid at the Student Activities Office. The van leaves at 8:15 and will load up for return at 4:30.

There is a $5 charge to join the Ski Club, which offers downhill and cross-country skiing. You will then receive a ticket which is required before you can ski at Mt. Hood Meadows.

Two Ski Balls are planned, Jan. 26 and Feb. 23. Both of these are on a Monday night from 4 to 10 and lifts lessons, and rentals will cost $5 each. These Ski Balls are only for college students and there will be special meal and drink prices.

On Jan 14 there will be a skiing movie shown in the Fireside Room at noon and 7. Another benefit of the Ski Club is a discount card which is good off all but sale items, G.I. Joe for 10%, and Milwaukee Ski Sport for 20% off on any ski items.

There are many benefits of skiing, as advisor Nancy Mikle points out. "Skiing offers social ability," she said. "It has potential for aerobics and most people are doing it for the exercise."

Mt. Hood Meadows is really buckling down on safety this year. The real problems seem to be skiers getting run into by other people. If caught skiing recklessly or dangerously, the skier's ticket can be taken away, and the skier will be required to watch a movie on ski safety.

Injuries can happen fairly easily, but can be avoided with proper preparation. "I think it is important to stretch before you ski," states Mikleton. Stretching will eliminate the ligament pain and the sore muscles.

Mikleton also pointed out that the Ski Club is open to the community.

Students may sign up for the Saturday's event and pickup Ski Club applications at the Student Activities office.
