FUN IN THE SUN - Disregard for classes is exhibited by various students as they wallow in the sunny spring weather.

Buckle up - protect yourself, protect others

In recent months a bill has been proposed that would make wearing seat belts mandatory for all Oregonians, not just those under 16. Although some Oregonians may feel that this bill infringes on their personal freedom, they are not looking at the whole picture.

This bill has been designed not only to protect Oregonians over 16 from being injured, but it will also protect those under 16 from being crushed and smothered by unrestrained parents flying around in a car when it crashes. The first seat belt law was passed to protect children from injury, but in order for there to be a more complete protection this seat belt law must also be passed.

It seems rather foolish for people to be opposed to a law that is designed to save their lives, but perhaps it's easier to take a risk on getting seriously injured or killed than to break a habit and "buckle-up" the next time, and every time, an Oregonian sits in a car seat.

Neale Frothingham officially declared his candidacy for Associated Student Government President today by submitting a petition signed by 213 Clackamas Community College Students to have his name placed on the ballot. Only 100 signatures were required.

Neale Frothingham's past experience in student government include four years of high school student government experience in the offices of representative, Sophomore class representative, Three Rivers League Representative, and Public Relations Director, followed by two terms as a A.S.G. Senator Aid Advisory Committee. Neale received numerous leadership awards and held many other minor leadership positions while in high school. Neale is extremely well qualified to hold Associated Student Government office.

Neale's main objectives as A.S.G. president would be to make sure that student financial aid is protected from cuts, polling students to make sure that the A.S.G. is meeting student needs and expectations not wasting A.S.G. funds, making sure students are informed about and strongly represented in college policy and making sure the college newspaper functions as a free press.

Neale may be reached for interview at ext. 2451 or at 656-7486. He would be glad to expand more fully on his platform and qualifications for the office of A.S.G. President. Thank you for your consideration of this summary news release.

The Print encourages student participation in the upcoming ASG elections April 23 and 24.

EXERCISE your right TO VOTE!

To the Editor:

Hi, my name is Dana Dumolt and I'm running for the office of student body president. I feel that the students should know everyone who is running for the top ASG office. I want people to get to know me, so I am taking this opportunity to tell people about me and some of my views.

I joined ASG during the winter term of this year as an assistant to the president senator. I was part of the ASG effort that sponsored the drive to lobby the federal legislators against cutting financial aid programs. Also during this time I have been the chairman of the Constitution and Bylaw Revisions Committee. I have done a lot of work on this committee and really enjoy what I'm doing.

I completed 8 credits with a 3.00 GPA last term and am taking 11 credits this term. I take my studying seriously and although being president would take a lot of my time, I know it won't interfere with my studies. I have talked to the current president and past president and officers about their experiences and I know that I can do a good job.

I would like to get to know as many students and teachers as I can before elections, so if you see me, stop me, talk to me, and tell me what you would like to see different at this school. I want to be open and honest with you, so don't hesitate to be friendly. Enjoy your classes and I hope I see you soon.

Sincerely,
Dana Dumolt

NONTRAS

As you can see, some of the students use the lounge for study, but personally, I find it too noisy for that.
